U. S. ASKS ECONOMIC ARMISTICE

Today

Foreigners Depart.
Silver For Money.
Borah Says Go To.
Japan Teaches Us.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HEARST RANCH, San Simeon, Cal., April 29.

THE FOREIGNERS are departing.

Mr. MacDonald left with a high opinion of President Roosevelt, quite satisfied with the result of his mission.

Monsieur Herriot returns to France "with a clear understanding of President Roosevelt's views on war debts, political security for Europe and economic disarmament."

THE AMERICAN people have no such clear understanding, and will be glad when their turn comes to be enlightened.

It has not been explained to them why they should be in any way responsible for "political security for Europe."

They remember well the last time they were made responsible for that security, providing three million men and many billions of dollars, and hope that will not happen again soon. We do not START Europe's wars. Why should we be expected to stop them?

YESTERDAY THE Senate voted to let the President accept $200,000,000 in silver, in settlement of Europe's war debts, to take the silver at fifty cents an ounce, or 400,000,000 ounces of silver in payment of $200,000,000 debt. Lucky, if we get it.

The idea is not new. Two years ago, in the White House, President Hoover informed the writer that England would be allowed to pay one-half in silver at fifty cents per ounce. Half England's annual payment would be $80,000,000 or 160,000,000 ounces.

Your government tells you, bring in any gold you have, above $100, by May 1, or you may pay $10,000 fine, go to jail, or both.

Mr. Borah, in the Senate, says:

"As far as I am concerned, if I had $5,000 in gold, I'd tell the government to go to hell."

In the record he modified it to read:

"I'd defy the government to come and get it."

THEY ASK, with Borah:

"What right has the government to ask a frugal citizen who has money in his sock to put it in a bank, when the bank is not safe?"

However, Americans, as Northcliffe truly said, are "a docile people" and will do as they are told.

It may comfort you to learn that the British have more gold than ever in their history, and are thinking of going back on the gold basis. No Englishman is ordered to bring in his gold. Such an order would make him laugh.

NORMAN H. DAVIS, "ambassador without portfolio" at the League of Nations meeting, is not an ambassador without opinions.

Germany says she wants restoration of equality in arms and all national defense within five years. Mr. Davis says:

"I am uneasy at the turn this discussion has taken. The world has suffered too much from an excess of nationalism."

This part of the world has suffered too much from meddling in Europe's affairs, and wishes that might cease. What have we to do with French and German quarrels concerning Germany's right to prepare for the next war? We shall have plenty to do, keeping out of it.

JAPANESE TROOPS, pressing ahead, while pacifists talk and rebuke, are within sixty miles of Peiping, ancient capital of China.

A cable from Peiping tells you:

"The way for the Japanese attack was paved by bombs dropped from eight Japanese planes."

When Charles the Twelfth, of Sweden, was cutting through Russia with a handful of men, defying the vast armies of Peter the Great, the latter said:

"My brother Charles is teaching me about war."

Our brother, the Mikado, is teaching us about war, as it is to be fought in future, and American "observers" with the Japanese army would be more useful than observers at Geneva.

UNCLE SAM has lost an island. It stood, formerly, at the mouth of Cook Inlet, one hundred and sixty miles south of Anchorage, Alaska, and was twenty miles long, about five miles broad, with an extinct volcano, for ornament.

This piece of property, called Augustine Island, is supposed to have disappeared, following a series of more than 100 violent earthquake shocks, possibly carrying down with it several trappers.

EXPERTS REPORT to Washington that in violent earthquakes, the earth moves up and down, as well as sidewise, a reminder of the air currents that destroyed the big dirigible.

It is believed that study of earth movements will make possible absolutely safe anti-earthquake construction.

IOWA FARMERS seized a judge, whose actions in mortgage foreclosure cases did not please them, beat him, covered him with mud, threatened to hang him, put a rope around his neck, and let him go only after he had fainted, and then prayed for them and for himself.

In times such as these farmers sympathize, sometimes violently, with other farmers in financial trouble.

BUT FARM owners are again reminded that the value of a

A. D. CADENHEAD . . STRUCK DOWN FROM BEHIND IN AMBUSH

MAUG, PAL LINKED IN NEW HOLDUP

State police were searching the northern end of the county today following an attack and robbery near Allison Park last night, in the belief the perpetrators may have been John Maug and Edward Turpack, escaped convicts of Western Penitentiary.

Justice of the Peace Albert T. Lorch, "the shooting squire" of Allison Park, joined in the hunt in the same district in which the Maug gang shot and killed Constable Vernon (Port) Moses.

Springing from shrubbery where they had secreted themselves, highwaymen felled A. D. Cadenhead, 50, operating manager of the Etna plant, Spang-Chalfant Company, and his assistant, George Smith, 35, of Aspinwall. Both were knocked unconscious and Smith robbed of his wallet containing $30.

ATTACKED NEAR HOME

The attack occurred at the entrance of Cadenhead's Allison Park Heights home as the two were walking toward Smith's automobile parked in front of the house.

Constable Thomas Bennett, of Lorch's office, who also participated in the manhunt, said he believed the object of the attack was to obtain the keys to Smith's car.

Informations against the two captured convicts, Freddie Prince and Theodore Geisler, were made today by Lawrence Devlin, of 131 Arlington avenue, Mt. Oliver, in

Let the Democratic Party Be Democratic

GENTLEMEN OF THE Democratic Congress: You must perform your duties under the Constitution or you certainly will be and certainly should be retired from office.

You Congressmen are elected by the people. You do not occupy your office by hereditary right.

The American people elected this Congress, as they have elected other Congresses, to act constitutionally and to perform the legislative functions of a Congress.

They elected Mr. Roosevelt to be President under the Constitution and to perform the duties of the executive and execute the legislative acts of the Congress.

There was no mention, no thought of abandoning constitutional government in the presidential campaign.

There was no suggestion that Mr. Roosevelt be made a dictator, no intimation that any change was contemplated in the fundamental principles or policies of the republic.

There was not even a suspicion that the Mussolini idea of the concentration of all the powers of government in the hands of one man would invade not only European states, but the United States as well.

IF THE DEMOCRATIC party, the party of popular government, had advanced such a reactionary idea so inconsistent with its avowed principles, so utterly at variance with the genuine principles of its founder and of all the fathers of the republic, the renegade Democratic party would undoubtedly have been defeated in the election.

The people would have felt it a patriotic duty to defeat a party with a program so subversive of the principles of free government.

The Democratic party would not have dared to put a plank in its platform for a surrender of the rights of Congress to make a dictator of a President.

If it did not dare to adopt a policy of dictatorship in its platform, why does it dare to adopt such a policy now?

Do the Democrats in Congress think that there will be no more elections?

Do the Democrats feel that they can pursue the autocratic policies which made the Repub-

END TO WORLD TRADE WARFARE URGED ON POWERS

LONDON, April 29.—(AP.)—A proposal for a far-reaching world economic armistice, designed to interrupt the warfare of prohibitive tariffs and exchange restrictions, was submitted by the United States today to the organizing committee of the world economic conference.

The proposal was made by Norman H. Davis, American ambassador-at-large, who declared after the meeting that every member of the committee seemed to be pleased with it, "although two or three did apepar to be greatly surprised."

The committee formally fixed the date for the opening of the world economic conference as June 12.

The committeemen were unable to take any action on the American proposal, but they decided to notify the governments. This will be done simultaneously with the issuance of invitations to the world parley.

The truce would put a stop to economic warfare until the agreements to be reached at the conference can be made effective. It would end trade and commerce barriers of all kind, including tariffs sufficiently high to act as barriers, bounties on exports, prohibitions, dumping and restrictions on exchange.

Its purpose is to wips away all of the deliberate actions of governments which have operated to diminish international trade.

Sir John Simon, British foreign Secretary, who presided, and Mr. Davis walked into the Locarno room at the conclusion of the meeting and stood talking for several minutes, their arms locked together like old friends.

Ray Atherton, American charge d'affaires, also attended the committee session.

HOUSE SPEEDS VOTE ON INFLATION BILL

WASHINGTON, April 29.—(AP.)—Speedy House action was promised today to complete Congressional approval and give the administration unprecedented machinery to inflate the currency and increase farm prices.

Concluding three weeks of turbulent debate, the Senate last night voted the sweeping power by 64 to 20 after defeating a soldiers' bonus amendment and authorizing the acceptance of up to $200,000,000 in silver on war debt payments.

Speaker Rainey will seek to send the omnibus farm relief-inflation legislation to conference Monday for adjustment of Senate and House differences.

The House already has approved the farm relief sections, which contemplate price lifting and mortgage easing through refinancing at lower interest rates.

The inflation legislation was added to the farm bill in the Senate and gives the President a choice of methods for undertaking a controlled expansion of credit and currency.

In an almost running-fire of roll calls, the Senate rejected the FORBES FIELD, April 29.—The Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals clashed in the final battle of their two-game series here this afternoon.

The Pirates, having won the first engagement, 2 to 0, were eager to make it two straight over the Cardinals.

Heinie Meine was expected to ascend the mound for the Corsairs, while Bill Walker was due to pitch for the visitors.

Both teams will head west tonight for Sunday engagements, the Pirates going to Cincinnati for a single contest with the Reds, while the Cards go to Chicago to meet the Cubs in a bargain bill.

WATER FIRM HERE CUTS RATES AGAIN

A rate reduction to 40,000 customers was announced by the South Pittsburgh Water Company today. It is the second reduction in a year and is effective Monday.

According to the company, the reduction means a total decrease of $2.46 a year per customer, as compared with the minimum rates effective November 1, 1932, a cut in revenue to the company of $110,000.

According to the company figures, the two recent reductions total as follows:

Ten thousand gallons of water a year, 22 per cent reduction.

Twenty thousand gallons a year, 17 per cent reduction.

Thirty thousand gallons a year, 14 per cent reduction.

Forty thousand gallons a year, 12 per cent reduction.

The rates, indorsed by the Public Service Commission, will mean an annual saving of 7½ per cent a year for the customers, it is said.

The company's statement said:

"The large majority of the customers of the company use water at the rate of 10,000 to 20,000 gallons a year. Bills of all such customers were reduced $1.86 last November and the additional reduction to these customers, now made, amounts to 60 cents annually."

Attorney Joseph A. Beck, for the company, said the reductions were made possible through economies effected by the company.

He said:

"If President Roosevelt's program of jumping prices does not become effective, these economies can be realized. But if his program is effective it will not be realized."

CITY, NATION MARK PRESIDENT'S DAY

Pittsburgh and the nation observe "President's Day" tomorrow.

Beginning at one minute after midnight tonight, when a prayer will be sent around the world from Radio Station KDKA, there will be a continuous program expressing hope and thanksgiving.

Other radio programs tomorrow will be presented over WJAS at 3 p. m. and over WCAE at 7:30 p. m.

On the WCAE program, Col. Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute; Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, and Walter A. Jones, associate of M. L. Benedum, will be speakers. WJAS will present three clergymen and a 40-voice chorus. KDKA's prayer has been written by Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, pastor of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church.

President's Day should be a great spiritual aid to President Roosevelt and those Presidents who, in the years to come, carry the burdens as chief executive of the United States, David L. Lawrence, chairman of the Democratic party in Allegheny County, and friend of the President, said today.

Lawrence's commendation followed that of statesmen, leading clerymen of all creeds, industrial and civic leaders throughout the land.

MARKETS RUSH UP IN BUYING STAMPEDE

NEW YORK, April 29.—Stocks and commodities rolled up huge aggregate gains today.

Prompted by the Senate's approval of the Farm Relief-Inflation measure and favorable business news, huge new buying orders were hurled into the markets.

The New York Stock Exchange experienced the biggest Saturday trading volume in three years, sales approximately 3,390,000 shares, and prices at the close were up $1 to $10.

American Can was the sensation on the "Big Board," soaring $10, while American Telephone spurted $5 and American Tobacco B $7.

Wheat futures scored advances of two to three cents a bushel at Chicago. Cotton finished with gains ranging from $1.95 to $2.10 a bale while sugar, silver, rubber and other staples rallied strongly.

WOODIN DENIES RIFT WITH F. R.; HITS FOES

WASHINGTON, April 29.—(AP.)—Secretary Woodin from his sickbed today issued a statement denying reports that he was going to resign and was at odds with President Roosevelt over the inflation program.

Summoning newspaper reporters to his side for a special press conference, the Secretary declared that not only did he have no intention of giving up the Secretaryship of the Treasury, but also he approved of the President's program throughout. He said:

"I am with the chief (President Roosevelt) to the end.

"He is going to lead us out of this situation."

The Secretary charged that enemies of the administration were circulating the reports that he would quit the cabinet, in an effort to create dissension, adding:

"It is most unsportsmanlike that those who seek to hamper the administration in such an emergency should resort to such expedients."

REVOLT BREAKS OUT IN CUBAN PROVINCE

HAVANA, April 29.—(AP.)—Information received here today said a revolt had broken out in Oriente province.

Disorders were reported in the towns of Songo, San Luis, and Boniato.

Two soldiers were reported to have been killed in Boniato.

Troops armed with machine guns were rushed from Santiago to the three towns and all streets and parks in Santiago itself, principal city of the province, were ordered cleared.

The situation in Havana appeared tense. Communication lines to the interior were subjected to censorship.

It was impossible to ascertain the spread of the reported uprising because of the strict supervision of dispatches.

DEATH OF PRISONER LAID TO CLUBBING

Five men who claim they saw a city policeman strike a man on the head with his night stick gave statements to Lieut. of Homicide Detectives Frank Ferris today as he investigated the death of Lawrence O'Malley, 21, of 16 McClean street, in South Side Hospital Friday.

McClean died in a cell, from a fractured skull, after his arrest for drunkenness by Patrolman Hiram McAbee, attached to Mt. Washington Police Station.

The five young men were standing with O'Malley in front of 611 Warrington avenue. They testified that McAbee and O'Malley quarreled after O'Malley refused to leave at the patrolman's command. The pair grappled, they testified, and McAbee struck O'Malley with his mace.

Son Whipped, Man Kills 2 And Self

HOLTON, Ind., April 29.—(AP.)—David Rea, township trustee, and J. H. Petty, high school principal, were shot and killed today by Frank Ellis, a shoemaker, who had quarreled with them over the punishment of his son by a high school teacher.

Ellis committed suicide after killing the two men.

The shooting occurred on the street near the shoemaker's shop. Witnesses said he came from his shop armed with the shotgun and after a brief discussion with the two victims opened fire.

FRENCH-GERMAN RIVALRY SNAGS DISARMAMENT PARLEY

OPEN CONFLICT ON TROOPS EXPECTED

Two Countries Hold Fate of Geneva Conference

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 29.—(AP.)—Rivalry between Germany and France for political power in Europe, as expressed in comparative armaments, is expected definitely to come out into the open as the result of another conflict between the two nations at the world disarmament conference today.

France, backed up by Poland and Czechoslovakia, declared that the German state police, estimated at about 100,000 men, constitute a potential military organization and therefore should be counted as part of the German army.

This position was expressed at a meeting of the conference committee on effectives. Delegates of France and her two supporting nations contended that because of their training and maneuvers, the state police could form an important section of the German army in the event of war.

The Germans were certain to reject this thesis.

Many delegates have expressed the belief that it would be a good thing for the rivalry between Germany and France to come into the open. This belief is predicated on the ground that disarmament is essentially a German-French problem which must be tackled frankly.

If the disarmament conference, as is expected, fails to bring about abolition of military aviation, Germany will demand the right to possess military aircraft, now forbidden her by the Treaty of Versailles, and may also insist on her right to maintain a bigger navy.

The Berlin government will make a vigorous effort to prevent such organizations as Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Storm Troops from being counted as effectives.

COLONY READY FOR ART FETE

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, Cal., April 29.—(INS.)—This famous colony today became the mecca of the art world—the gay, bizarre Quat'z Arts Ball takes place tonight.

This is the annual affair which permits the artist to "cut loose," so to speak, and John Catlin, famous mayor of this village by the sea and referee in many tilts between its "arty" neighbors, is "set" for the fiesta. He explains:

"The costumes for tonight's party are to give the artists opportunity to cast off inhibitions—each costume is to reflect a secret ambition or urge of its wearer.

"Say, I've had a preview at a few of these costumes. My face would be red, but I've been mayor of Carmel too long for that."

Police Chief Gus England refused to permit three girls, the Misses Matilda Crowninshield, Gilda Daly and Naomi Wilmers, to perform a triple sister act as Lady Godivas on Carmel's one white horse, and a furious dispute remained unsettled.

Besides the big economic issues, Bennett was learned today to have taken up the controversy about damage by fumes from the Trail (British Columbia) smelter, to property across the Washington state line, and the failure of the United States to sign the 1930 treaty for the rehabilitation of the sockeye salmon industry along the Fraser River.

CHINESE FLEE TO PEIPING

TOKIO, April 29.—(AP.)—Smashed in a fierce assault by Nippon's soldiers, Chinese troops are streaming in disorderly retreat toward Peiping from the north, Japanese reports said today.

The Japanese were said to be reorganizing their forces for pursuit toward the former imperial capital of China. A follow-up attack is planned, latest dispatches said, although the Japanese command previously had declared that its aim was merely to break up Chinese concentration immediately south of Kupeikow, the Great Wall pass north of Peiping.

Manchukuo has invited Russia to present proposals for settlement of the dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway. The proposals would be discussed at a meeting in early May.

A compromise will be sought to break the deadlock which has seriously strained relations between the Soviet government and Manchukuo.

MARRIAGE BAN STIRS GERMANY

BERLIN, April 29.—(INS.)—A new church conflict apeared imminent today as the German Christians of Thuringia introduced a resolution into their state church congress providing a church wedding can be refused to couples whose "racial differences are too great."

The resolution signified opposition to inter-marriages between jews and christians.

Further trouble was forecast when Father Aalen, a Catholic priest ruled Nazi storm troopers would not be permitted to bring Swastika flags into his church for the May 1 labor day celebrations.

The district troop commander immediately advised his men to quit the Catholic Church and attend the Protestant Church instead.

Weather Conditions.

The principal feature on the weather map this morning is a low pressure area centered over Colorado; lowest barometer reported, 29.25 inches, at Pueblo. This disturbance covers the entire country from the Ohio Valley states westward and is causing cloudy weather nearly everywhere from the Rocky Mountain states to the Missippi River, and a rather general shower condition throughout that area. It is also causing rising temperature throughout the central valleys. Following the low pressure, in the Northwest, the weather is cold. Temperatures are below freezing in Alberta and Saskatchewan. High pressure over the Atlantic Coast states is attended by clear skies and moderately cool.

WIFE BEAT HIM, MINISTER SAYS

SCRANTON, Pa., April 29.—(INS.)—A decree in divorce was granted by Lackawanna County Court yesterday to the Rev. Richard L. Everett, former Baptist minister of Chester, who has been living here for the last two years.

The minister charged his wife, Gwenllyean, with cruel treatment, averring among other things that she "choked and scratched" him and assaulted him with a shoe and a poker while he way lying in bed preparing a sermon.

They were married in Binghamton, N. Y., in 1919, and later lived in New Jersey. Mrs. Everett left her husband in 1930, according to the testimony.

HOUSE SPEEDS INFLATION MEASURE

soldiers' bonus plan by 60 to 28, approved the silver provision by 53 to 32, passed the inflation section by 64 to 21 and then rolled up a final, sweeping majority of 64 to 20 for the entire measure, including inflation.

Only three Democrats voted against inflation—Glass, of Virginia; Bailey, of North Carolina, and Bulkley, of Ohio. On final passage, farm and inflation, there were only four Democrats in opposition, Clark, of Missouri, voting with those who were against inflation.

The farm sections authorize Secretary Wallace to attempt higher farm prices through marketing agreements and controlled production, and through the levying of processing taxes and licensing fees.

POWERS LISTED

The inflation section contemplates first an expansion of credit up to $3,000,000,000 through open market purchases of government obligations by Federal Reserve banks. If this does not serve to lift prices, the President would be empowered to:

Direct the issuance of $3,000,000,000 in treasury notes or new currency to purchase outstanding government obligations and provide for appropriations to redeem 5 per cent of the notes annually for 25 years.

Lower the gold content of the dollar by not more than 50 per cent, either by proclamation or by an international agreement looking to a stabilization of world currencies and exchanges.

Accept up to $200,000,000 in silver at not more than 50 cents an ounce as payments on war debts due this country in the next six months; to issue silver certificates against the silver and coin the metal to meet any demands for redemption of the certificates.

Remonetize silver at a ratio with gold fixed by the President and provide for free coinage of both gold and silver at such a ratio.

TROOPS SEIZE 4 IN ATTACK ON JUDGE

Iowa Congressman, Militia Chief Confer On Farm Rioting

LE MARS, Iowa, April 29.—(AP.)—Four farmers, allegedly ringleaders in the abduction and mistreatment of Judge C. C. Bradley Thursday, were arrested and held in custody of Iowa National Guardsmen today as a military investigation into the affair proceeded.

Judge Bradley aroused the ire of the mob because he refused to promise not to order further farm mortgage foreclosure sales.

The men were arrested by guardsmen who were active in patroling the county today. They were placed under heavy guard.

Under the state of martial law existing in the county formal charges are unnecessary to hold the men.

Representative Gustave Alesch (Dem.), of Plymouth County, conferred today with Col. Glenn Haynes, commander of the military unit, but declined to disclose the nature of the conversation.

Alesch said he was at the Ed Durband farm near Le Mars as a member of a committee seeking to settle the mortgage foreclosure dispute over that property when Judge Bradley was dragged from his courtroom.

He declared he had no knowledge of impending violence by a mob and expressed the belief that no one could have prevented the affair without bloodshed.

REED REPLIES TO ATTACK

WASHINGTON, April 29.—(AP.)—Senator Reed (Rep.), Pennsylvania, denied in the Senate yesterday that he helped organize the "Republican Federal Associates," a group recently set up to stimulate efforts to regain Republican party control.

Quoting from an open letter to him from David M. Newbold, Philadelphia lawyer, criticising his anti-inflation stand, declaring all persons now should be "Americans and not partisans," and attacking him for assisting in reorganizing the Republican organization, Reed said:

"I have not only had nothing to do with organizing this group, but I have no knowledge of its purposes and have not been invited to join it."

South Side police testified before Magistrate John J. Sweeney that the elder Slater had a box of narcotics when arrested.

PAULINE STARKE

PAULINE STARK FILES SUIT

LOS ANGELES, April 29.—(AP.)—Charging coercion through representations of influence with Superior Court judges, Pauline Starke, stage and screen actress, had filed suit today to set aside a property agreement with her former husband, Jack White, movie executive, and asked a "fair" division of about $250,000 in community property.

Miss Starke said she was induced to sign the settlement through representations of Charles Allison, former court receiver, that he had influence with Judges Walter Guerin, John L. Fleming and Dailey S. Stafford, and she would stand little chance of getting any property in court. All of the judges since have been defeated for re-election.

Under the original settlement, the suit said, Miss Starke was to receive White's note for $22,000, secured by a mortgage on certain real estate now in litigation.

Miss Starke charged that Allison, now serving a federal prison sentence on a fraud charge in connection with the American Mortgage Company state receiverships, was sent to her by White.

The court granted his petition for appeal to the United States Circuit Court and he was released under $1,500 bond.

Beating sheriffs and judges that try to collect mortgages will not make farm loans popular.

With the ballot and an overwhelming majority in some states, farmers should be able to express their will without a rope.

SEATTLE IS tired of racketeer bombing outrages and citizens are determined to do something about it. Mayor John F. Dore says the bombings, of which there have been six in February, March and April of this year, "are the work of an organized group, headed by men who pass for respectable and even prominent citizens."

This indicates that the Mayor knows the racketeers, in which case Seattle will make them uncomfortable.

The difficulty, usually, is to identify criminals, because witnesses fear vengeance.

Hunt for Killer Centers At Allison Park Attack Scene

whose car the two were trying to escape when caught by police.

The two were charged with larceny, receiving stolen goods and operating a motor vehicle without consent of the owner. The car was stolen near Devlin's home several hours before the bandits were captured, on the North Side.

Geisler and Prince were held by city detectives today. They were plied with questions in an effort to obtain information concerning the plans of Maug and Turpack.

At the request of detectives, six persons held for questioning on the escape, were discharged by Magistrate T. D. Jones in Morals Court. They are Leonard Ginter and his foster-father, Walter de Miller, of 6340 Shakespeare street; Mrs. Ada Rothermel, of 116 West Erie street, mother of Maug; her two daughters, Mrs. Eleanor Stemmler and Mrs. Edna Friedel and her son Thomas Rothermel.

REQUEST FOR RELEASE

Detectives told the magistrate:

"At this time we are not able to connect these people with the penitentiary break."

Thomas Byrnes, 29, also arrested at the West Erie street address, was released in $1,000 bond for a hearing next week. He is held in connection with the finding of rugs in the place of which he claimed ownership.

John Flaherty, of Sandusky street, tried with Maug and acquitted, is the only person connected with the case not apprehended in the roundup of Maug's friends. The name of Thomas Flaherty had been used erroneously.

Belief that Maug and Turpack are hiding on or near the North Side was strengthened when a man who said he had been a schoolmate of Maug's informed police he had seen Maug and Turpack in an automobile at West North avenue and Palo Alto street as he alighted from a street car last night. Maug nodded to him, the man said. From his nearby home the man telephoned police. Heavily armed police and detectives hurried to the scene, but found no trace of the men or the car.

FUTILE CHASE

A short time later police sped to the Mt. Washington roadway when informed that two men had abandoned an automobile, of the same make in which the North Side man said he had seen Maug and Turpack, in the road. Police soon learned the car belonged to a butcher who ran out of gas.

Freight trains passing through the Fort Wayne yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad were searched after police had been informed two men had leaped over an embankment into the yards. While the trains and yards were being searched, another squad of police and detectives surrounded a house in West North avenue in which Maug had formerly lived. Numerous other tips sent police and detectives to various sections of the city in search of the fugitives.

Relating the prison break to police, Geisler said they had hidden on the roof of the penitentiary hospital from 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon until early Thursday morning and escaped by using improvised ropes and a ladder they made from prison materials.

Prince, however, told police they did not go to the hospital roof until after dark, hiding in the prison yard all afternoon. The rope, made up in sections, was assembled on the roof. The ladder was made out of scaffolding, Prince said.

Prince and Geisler will face hearing before Alderman Georg A. Young, of Preble avenue, on charges of breaking and escaping from the penitentiary. The charge was filed by Parole Officer William Gaffeney yesterday.

Closed Banks Here Pay Depositors Millions

The Second District Realization Corporation, conducting liquidation of 43 closed state banks in the Pittsburgh territory, has paid depositors $12,388,896 and has paid off $7,054,155 of other debts of the banks, according to an announcement today by James C. Chaplin, president of the Colonial Trust Company and president of the realization organization.

The closed banks had deposits of $53,552,660 at the time of their closing and had other debts of $7,790,106.

In the whole state the five Realization Corporations have paid dividends of $50,187,000 against deposits of $209,689,000.

In the distribution of the $50,187,000 in dividends it was necessary to prepare 1,250,000 individual checks. Of these 164,000 checks remain uncashed. They represent $384,000.

The division of closed banks of the state banking department has made every effort to locate these depositors, most of whom did not notify banks of their proper addresses.

Girl Upholds Pastor's Denial of Romance

OMAHA, Neb., April 29.—(AP.)—Following the Rev. Dr. Oliver D. Baltzly on the witness stand in District Court late yesterday, Miss Gertrude Gruenig repeated denials made by the portly 61-year-old former Omaha pastor that they had ever kissed or embraced each other.

Testifying as defendant in a $50,000 alienation of affections suit brought by Dr. Baltzly's divorced wife, Miss Guenig also denied she had even spent the night in his church, as a previous witness for Mrs. Baltzly had quoted her as admitting.

Previously, Dr. Baltzly had denied, item by item, testimony offered by witnesses for his former wife, including a statement by Jacob Wigender, former church janitor, that he saw a "swish of skirts" when he entered the church nursery one evening.

Miss Gruenig's testimony coincided with that of the former pastor, who obtained an Arkansas divorce in 1931 on grounds of desertion while his wife was living in Long Beach, Cal.

Miss Gruenig replied emphatically in the negative to a direct question as to whether she had ever kissed Dr. Baltzly.

COUNTY MOVES TO REMEDY CHILD WARD HOME SYSTEM

REPORT ON EVIL SURROUNDINGS PROMPTS ACT

Investigators Told To Continue Probe, Suggest New Plan

With only 240 of the 636 homes in which Juvenile Court wards are maintained visited to date, investigators for the County Commissioners have been ordered to continue their work, make another report at an early date and include recommendations to remedy the system.

A copy of the report to date will be given Juvenile Court authorities who will be asked to suggest improvements in the system.

A boy, 15, had to do the family washing before school hours. Another boy had to haul milk cans four miles in an express wagon and work on the farm.

SEPARATE TABLES

One family did not let the children eat at the same table but fed them the leftover and sour food in the kitchen. There were numerous reports of wards not being permitted to eat with the family.

Wards were restricted to the kitchen and cellar and only permitted in the living room for a few minutes each evening to hear their favorite radio program.

Wards were rehearsed before being interviewed by county investigators and threatened with being sent to the poor house or other institutions if they told investigators the home was not satisfactory.

The court's visitation officers, the foster parent and school doctors were criticized for neglecting the eyes and teeth of children. Repeated complaints to court attaches for the need of attention went unheeded.

Favoritism shown in obtaining clothing for wards. Some wards unable to get any clothes and one boy received one suit, seven extra pairs of pants, seven pairs of shoes and many shirts and ties within a month. When the foster mother told court attaches that the boy was getting more than his share, the court took the ward away from her.

DRINKING PERMITTED

Foster parents permitted drinking and gambling in homes where wards were maintained.

Two girl wards were attacked, but the person responsible was not prosecuted. One case was reported to the court and the girl was removed, but another was sent to the same home, where the man responsible resided.

The report was presented by Leo A. Riordan, chief county investigator, to the County Commissioners. R. Armond Dawns, one of the juvenile probation officers, was present.

The Commissioners ordered Riordan to continue his investigation and report again, also making recommendations.

Commissioner C. M. Barr said the conditions were beyond belief and that he felt the county should place the children under one roof, either in one home or under the cottage plan as operated in Dayton, O.

The report indicated that approximbately 30 per cent of the homes were unsatisfactory through location or domestic conditions.

Twenty-three of the households investigated are in poor financial circumstances and six of these receive aid from charities. Eight other homes are operated by caretakers whose reputation is questioned. Wards are restricted from the facilities of the home in 11 other cases.

School Health Failure Charge Goes to Board

Portions of the report by county investigators on care of Juvenile Court wards may be called to the attention of the Board of Education, it was indicated today by the County Commissioners.

It was charged yesterday that school nurses and doctors failed in their duty to correct ill health of wards.

Ninety-five of the 710 children investigated need medical attention for their eyes and teeth, the report said. Investigators said the children had been suffering from such ailments for as long as five and six years without receiving treatment.

Chairman C. C. McGovern said:

"The foster parent, the court visitation officer and the school doctors are at fault. All neglected their responsibility. They should be made to give the children proper attention."

To this Commissioner C. M. Barr said:

"I agree with you there. These school doctors treat the school children like hogs."

It was also brought out that milk was denied county wards in the public schools.

One of the investigators said:

"The schools refused to give milk to the wards, even though they are 15 pounds under weight. School authorities believe the county is paying someone to feed these children and it is not their duty."

McGovern agreed that someone was being paid to feed the children, but that the attitude of the school officials needed investigation. He said the matter would be called to the attention of the School Board.

DOG RESCUED, 5 ESCAPE FIRE

A fireman rescued a collie dog from death in a fire which foced Dr. Robert Zugsmith, his wife and daughter, Helen, and two maids from their home at 5619 Marlborough road, Squirrel Hill, in night attire, early today.

The dog, a neighborhood pet known as "Scottie," overcome by smoke, was carried from the basement by Fireman Thomas Lyons of Engine Company No. 34 and revived.

The blaze was discovered by Theresa Kadsar, a maid, after she had been awakened by the ringing of the door bell, when the heat caused a short-circuit in the wiring. She awakened her sister, Katie, and the two made their way to safety after calling Dr. Zugsmith and his family.

Firemen said the blaze started in the basement from an undetermined cause and did $1,000 damage.

Three Carrick children escaped with scratches when a driverless automobile ran a block and crashed into an automobile parked in Valera avenue yesterday.

The brake was released and a minute later the machine struck the parked car. The youngsters suffered scratches on the forehead.

BIG STILL FOUND IN BELMONT MANSION

Agents Seize Liquor Plant in One-Time Haunt of '400'

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., N. Y., April 29.—(AP.)—Through the portals of the old Belmont mansion, which once opened only to admit society's bluest bluebloods, eight federal agents passed early today.

They came out with eight prisoners and the announcement that they had captured the largest alcohol still ever found in the New York area.

They found the 27-room house, once owned by the late Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, social dictator at the turn of the century, had been converted into a huge distillery.

Their eight prisoners, the agents announced, were mere employes of a leading alcohol dealer who was not named.

Although none of the Belmont furniture remained in the old white mansion, it still was decorated as in the palmy days. White plaster arabesques adorned the ceilings; the mirrors were polished—as was the brasswork of the still.

Mrs. Belmont's personal bedroom was a bedroom no longer. On the door was a neat sign:

"Private. Keep out. For mix and engineering departments only."

That was the distillery office.

Mrs. Belmont died in January in Paris. Her home was sold some time ago. It is located on two square miles of wooded land.

2 SHARON MEN DIE IN CHAIR

COLUMBUS, O., April 29.—(AP.)—Two Pennsylvanians, Tony Rotunno, 31, and Ralph Atterholt, 30, were put to death in the electric chair at Ohio Penitentiary last night for the slaying of Scott Vasbinder, of Newton Falls, O., a merchant policeman.

The doomed men, both from Sharon, Pa., appeared calm as they took their last short walks from the death cells to the chair.

Rotunno was the first to die. He was mumbling prayers as the guards strapped him into the chair. He was pronounced dead at 8:16 p. m. Three minutes later Atterholt, led by the Protestant chaplain, was brought in. The doctor pronounced him dead at 8:25 p. m.

BANDITS BEAT, ROB TWO MEN

Six armed robbers last night raided the home of "Sandy" Nickden, in Chestnut street, Noblestown, beat the aged man and escaped with a small sum of money. Previously they had attacked and beat Mrs. Nickden's stepson.

The younger man was about to enter the house at 9 o'clock when six men concealed near the house attacked him. He put up a battle, but was overpowered. The robbers led him into the house and, with drawn guns, attacked Nickden.

Cries of the victims summoned neighbors and the men fled, after obtaining a small amount of money.

Rubber Nipple Kills 6-Months Old Boy

A rubber nipple on a nursing bottle was blamed today for the death of the six-months-old son of John Taylor, of 934 Excelsior street, according to a morgue report. The child was found dead in its crib by its grandfather, John Taylor, Sr. Death had been caused by strangulation, the nipple probably shutting off the air passages after the child fell asleep, physicians said.

GARBO SECRECY BALKED BY U. S.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 29.—(INS.)—Greta Garbo, elusive motion picture actress returning to Hollywood after a long vacation in her native Sweden, steamed up the coast of lower Mexico today on the motorship Annie Johnson, resigned to being treated like any other passenger.

Miss Garbo's request to be given permission to drop off the boat at quarantine and thereby elude reporters was flatly rejected by Customs Collector William Ellison.

Consequently the tall, blonde actress who has built up an aura of mystery about herself must get off with the other passengers and submit to regular baggage inspection.

Then her long, dark limousine will whisk her to Hollywood where she will prepare to resume work next Tuesday.

MOUNTAIN GALE KILLED HINKLER

(Copyright, 1933, by The Associated Press.)

CASTEL SAN NICOLO, Italy, April 29.—Bert Hinkler, noted Australian speed pilot, apparently crashed head-on into a mountainside during a storm January 7, when he was killed here.

This was learned today when an Associated Press correspondent reached the scene where Italian charcoal burners found the body and shattered plane yesterday. The discovery came nearly four months after the famous airman started his attempt to regain the speed record for the England-Australia flight.

The body, not burned, was thrown 30 feet from the plane on the mountain Varco di Rocca.

A watch found in Hinkler's pocket stopped at 3 p. m., indicating he flew over here in daylight, but it was recalled a storm was then raging in this region. (Hinkler left Feltham Airdrome in Middlesex, England, at 3:10 a. m. January 7.)

WARNING HALTS CHURCH THEFTS

"Beware of Pickpockets" read signs tacked on the pillars in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, in Bloomfield.

Put there by Father Bonaventure Piscope after he received many complaints from parishioners of pickpockets' activities, he said conditions now are different.

He declared:

"Since the signs have been put up, the people have been on their guard and have not been bothered."

Pickpockets have been at work in St. Paul's Cathedral also. Detectives stationed in the church arrested a suspect, a man who was moving from pew to pew during services, and held him for further questioning.

Sneak thieves, too, have been at work in churches. Among those entered were the Church of the Immaculate Conception, St. Paul's Cathedral, St. Mary's Church, Lawrenceville, and Immaculate Heart Church, Bloomfield. Their loot, however, was slight in each case.

It is thought that neighborhood hoodlums are the guilty ones.

Uncle Sam Now Ump, Not Chump, So - - Play Ball!

—By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER—

The United States is something new in sport. It is a playing umpire.

We're in the game and calling our own decisions. We can't lose.

That handshake across the sea didn't mean a thing until the knees started shaking, too.

Now, everybody wants to be friends. And it's about time. They desire to remove trade barriers, iron out the international wrinkles and play ball.

The most bitter opponents are now singing, "Old pal, don't you remember me?"

The Story of Esther -:- CHAPTER I -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

Xerxes, called Ahasuerus in the Bible, was a mighty monarch who ruled over Persia and Media. In the third year of his reign he bade the princes and nobles of his realm to a seven days' feast in his palace, where the princes made merry, reclining on beds of gold and silver and drinking from vessels of gold.

In another part of the royal household, Queen Vashti entertained the women. Xerxes, flushed with wine, ordered his chamberlains to bring the Queen to him that he might show her off to the people, for she was very beautiful. To the horror of the chamberlains, Vashti indignantly refused the bidding of her lord.

The initial protest was made on March 20, in the Calvary Baptist Church, New York, when, in spite of a heavy rain, 1,700 people were present and applauded the declaration adopted by the association which condemns the report because "it places Jesus Christ on the same plane with Buddha, Mohammed and other religious founders and denies His diety."

NEW INSURANCE REGULATIONS ISSUED

HARRISBURG April 29.—(AP.)—New rules governing life insurance companies incorporated in Pennsylvania and foreign companies permitted to do business in this state were announced last night by Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Armstrong.

The regulations, effective as of yesterday "until further order," are issued under the authority of an emergency act approved by the Governor on Wednesday.

Payment of dividends to stockholders on the capital stock of companies organized under Pennsylvania law is forbidden.

Death and disability benefits, matured endowments or annuities "must continue to be met promptly by all companies."

INDUSTRIAL POLICIES

Payments under industrial policies must be made in accordance with the policies to the extent of at least $150 on each policy.

Cash surrender values may be paid, or loans made on the security of policies or annuity contracts, only in the following circumstances:

To pay premiums or obligations of the policyholders to the company; to pay taxes, interest, rent, hospital and medical expenses and purchase food; for educational purposes; to farmers for agricultural purposes; to prevent penalties on commitments prior to April 4, 1933, and for continuance of payrolls.

Companies may allow an aggregate of $250 in withdrawals for such purposes, without restrictions except that withdrawals may not exceed the value of the policy; and companies may, to the extent of the loan value stated in the policy, make a loan in addition to any other authorized loan, equal to the total amount of premiums paid on the policy and on loans repaid to the company in cash since March 9, 1933.

SUMS ON DEPOSIT

Circumstances under which companies may pay to policyholders sums now on deposit with the company under life insurance policies or accumulated in connection with such policies:

Interest may be paid on any such sums at the due date.

Principal or installments may be paid which become due without the exercise of any option of withdrawal.

Any such sums may be applied for the payment to the company of premiums or other obligations of the policyholder.

Where the depositor has a withdrawal option under the terms of a deposit agreement, not more than $200 may be withdrawn in any calendar month, and the monthly withdrawal may not exceed 5 per cent of the entire amount to the depositor's credit.

On future deposits, companies may pay, without restriction, any sum deposited since March 9, 1933, in cash or as the proceeds of a death claim or matured endowment or on account of dividends accrued since that date.

Where application for loan or surrender value or for payment of any sum on deposit was pending on March 10, 1933, companies may make such payments if the applications were in good faith to cover engagements made by the policyholder before that date.

Full payment may be made and the account closed, where payments are permitted under the new regulation to any policyholder, and the net amount remaining with the company "is only a few dollars and in fact so small as not to warrant the bookkeeping expense of keeping the account open."

Where Pennsylvania's new regulations conflict with those of other states or the District of Columbia, this state's rules may be modified.

FIREMEN HONOR FATHER COX

Father Cox is in demand as a guest at benefits and other functions every night in the week. And when it does not conflict with his church services in Old St. Patrick's, he is on the go all the time, often attending two and three affairs in one night.

And he never fails to get a little help for his unemployed wherever he makes an appeal. Thursday night he was the guest of the North Braddock Volunteer Fire Department Band, was made an honorary member of the organization, and was presented with an official gold badge.

At this affair a new song entitled "The American Girl" was sung for the first time. It was written by William O'Shea, of McKeesport, who has several popular songs to his credit.

Yes, this was another record-breaking week in the Father Cox-Sun-Telegraph subscription drive. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

MUSIC

"AIDA"
International Grand Opera Company
Syria Mosque

Under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of Mercy Hospital Maurice Frank's International Grand Opera Company sang Verdi's "Aida" in Syria Mosque last night. It is a rule in all of Frank's performances to sing to a full house. Last night was no exception.

Mr. Lissfelt

In no other opera has Verdi been so generous with brilliant airs and ensembles as in "Aida." The curtain is hardly up until the hero must sing his most exacting music. From then on each principal follows with songs that are the stand-bys in studios and on the concert stage. No wonder then that the audience grows enthusiastic repeatedly during this opera, for here it has its chance to hum these familiar tunes and feel it is part of the show.

The first act presents all the principal characters excepting "Amonasro," and so we were immediately happy to learn what good voices were to sing. Anna Leskaya sang the leading role, disclosing a brilliant soprano and a talent for intense acting which is entirely proper to the part. Rosita Fordieri came to us again as "Amneris," which role lies even better in her voice than the Gypsy in Trovatore. Both these singers have more than adequate breadth in their style and are true opera singers. Edith Canter Lazear sang the "Priestess" with fine musical sense.

Edward Ransome's "Celeste Aida" was slightly marred by choppy phrases, but he regained his control during the procession and Nile scene. The "Ramphis," sung by Nino Ruisi, was dignified in bearing and in voice. Rossi's "Amonasro" dominated his various scenes, for he is both a good actor and singer. The smaller roles of the "King" and the messenger were well sung by Eugenio Prosperoni and Francesco Curci, respectively.

The chorus, drilled by Homer Ochsenhirt, showed decided improvement over its last performances. There was a ballet under the direction of Rosalyn Krokover, who also did an attractive symbolic solo dance. A quartet of children in a gay little dance before "Amneris" pleased the audience as much as the singers did. Gabriele Simeoni, the conductor, proved his tremendous talent once more, not only in whipping the opera into shape, but making it continuously better as the evening progressed. The orchestra itself was better.

There were fewer accidents in the pageantry, and the costumes, especially Ransome's, were regal.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

If You'd Know What to Do With an Oriental Rug

Be Here Monday!

JOSEPH HORNE CO

Pittsburgh has never seen the like of this May Sale of Oriental Rugs which opens here Monday. There are literally thousands of rugs, small and large, both washed and unwashed types—more than you, or we, ever saw before in one place at one time. Our only purpose is to urge you to be here Monday, and see the values for yourself. The prices would be amazing for domestic rugs!

A large importer was caught in the fall of the dollar on the foreign exchange, with a shipment of rugs in the custom house. He was forced to raise cash to get them out of the customs and appealed to us to help him find immediate sale for them at any price. We are little more than an agent in this deal, turning over to our customers practically the full benefit of the pieces, at prices which little more than cover the duty on the rugs.

They are beautiful rugs, and Pittsburgh homes will find plenty of use for them at these incredible prices. Oriental Rugs are being increasingly used for their decorative qualities, and there is no BETTER or SAFER INVESTMENT than a genuine Oriental Rug which will outlive two or three ordinary rugs!

Room-Size Rugs

The representation of room-size rugs is fully as extraordinary as the small rugs in both assortments and values. You will find rugs of all sizes and proportions, including special sizes and runners for halls and rooms of unusual dimensions, including very large sizes.

Interesting small rugs—5 and 6 ft. wide by 6 and 7½ ft. in length. Persians, Farahans, and Armenian types in ornate and colorful effects $69

Standard room sizes — 9x12 ft. rugs—gorgeous Chinese, Persians, and Indo-Sarouks. Qualities that would be good values today at $295, for $185

Museum-Type Rugs

Larger rugs of extraordinary interest, including a number of hand-woven reproductions of fine old museum pieces from the Palace of Delhi. These afford pleasing contrast to the usual commercial type of Oriental rugs, and their exquisite colorings and simple designs adapt them to modern homes. Pastel colors are well represented in the selection. A variety of sizes from 10x13 ft. to 11x16 ft. and larger, at $295 to $595.

On rugs over $50, convenient payments may be arranged

We have never seen throw rugs of this size and quality at even near this price! Approximately 2x3-ft. sizes—Persian Lilihans mostly in rich tones that give a warm touch of color to rooms.

$13.75

Hearth sizes and scatter rugs, approximately 3 ft. wide and 4 ft. long. Beluchistans and Persians, both excellent examples of their kind, with hundreds to choose from. Colorful and decorative types.

$19.75

The duty alone averages $14 apiece, which gives some idea of the values. Fine Kurds, 4 to 7-ft. wide, by 6 to 7-ft. long; also doorway strips, 2½x5-ft. The patterns are typical of the barbaric mountain district.

$23.75

TRADE LEADERS FAVOR TARIFF, DEBT BARGAIN

American business leaders engaged in foreign trade would strike a bargain with debtor nations by offering a reduction in war debts in exchange for currency stabilization and lowered tariff barriers.

This was the sense of a declaration of the twentieth National Foreign Trade convention which closed here yesterday. It said:

"The convention recommends that any modification of governmental debts due to the United States government should definitely provide for such treatment of our foreign trade by the debtor country as will assure access of American goods to its markets on fair competitive terms, not less favorable than those accorded imports from that country into our markets."

FAVOR EXECUTIVE POWER

Eugene P. Thomas, president of the National Foreign Trade Council, said he interpreted the declaration to mean the traders favored giving President Roosevelt the power to bargain for a reduction of debts in exchange for lower tariffs.

The declaration bore the inference that stable currency must also be agreed upon by the debtor nations, as the convention's pronouncement said:

"The convention recommends that the official delegates (to the forthcoming World Economic Conference) should be instructed to agree to the consideration at the conference of all measures which will promote the normal interchange of goods between nations. These questions include stabilization of exchanges, and the re-establishment of gold standards internationally, based on the requirements of the respective countries in relation to their own national economy."

There was a general approval on the part of the convention of President Roosevelt's "new deal." Thomas said he himself and, he believed, a majority of the convention were in accord with it in foreign policies as far as it had been revealed.

For the first time in its history, the council favored a reduction in the American tariff and a "reasonable increase of imports into this country."

The convention recommended that the President be invested with authority to altar by executive order any rates of duty within 50 per cent of the rates of the Tariff Act of 1930.

GUARANTEE SOUGHT

It also proposed that exporters be guaranteed against loss in extending credit. Transactions would be under supervision and the provision would be made through amendment of the act creating the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Formation of an American corporation of foreign bond holders and promotion of closer relations with Latin-America also were recommended.

Concerning revival of business, President Thomas said:

"The answer lies in Washington. The President, in his conferences, seems to be determining whether any general agreement is possible. I feel that in dealing with each nation individually, he is acting wisely."

FARRELL SEES BUSINESS GAIN

Turning with a smile from the deliberations of the National Foreign Trade convention, James A. Farrell, grand old man of industry, gave that as his parting word to Pittsburgh.

There was conviction behind the statement as he turned from the rostrum after banking the gavel that closed the twentieth convention sponsored by the National Foreign Trade Council yesterday.

Before the convention adjourned appreciation for the reception of the foreign traders here was expressed. J. Rogers Flannery was chairman of the local committee. In his final words before the convention, Mr. Farrell referred to Pittsburgh as his home city—a remark he made again and again during the convention.

The place of the next meeting will be selected in October.

Grofe Good, Sponsors Decide

By AIRCASTER

Ferde Grofe and his orchestra will remain with the new cigaret account at NBC, and hereafter the Grofe name will be announced. It was reported here two days ago that the patron was considering an entirely different show. As a matter of fact, the client had intimated that he wanted fresh auditions at NBC.

But as matters now stand, Grofe says, the cigaret gents say he is clicking wonderfully, and I'm glad, too.

Annette Hanshaw, who manages by some vocal witchcraft to project various pictures of herself by way of the microphone when she gives voice to indigo chants, has filed away a letter which reached her the other day. And hereafter when skies are lowering and the day is drab, she will take out the missive for a laugh.

The billet doux is from a lad in college. It seems the callow young man and his campus pal have argued over the Hanshaw "looks." Each had gained a different impression. There was no way for either to know that Annette is an eyeful.

The pal said:

But the callow youth replied:

And so he made a bet that Annette was pretty, wrote the letter asking for her picture, to prove it, and appended this postscript:

"And in case you are ugly, Miss Hanshaw, please send me a picture of a pretty dame with your name on it, so I won't lose my $5 bet."

"Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

"Don't let the New Jersey Dental Society put anything over on you," writes a retired East End dentist who heard the broadcast about the new idea in equipment that permits the patient to stop the drill when the pain gets intolerable.

An 8-year-old patient of my correspondent originated the idea years ago when the foot power engine drill was in universal use. He kept the engine belt or cord between his fingers, and when the going got too tough he simply clamped down on it and stopped the engine.

In the men's home at Mayview, "The Match King" pursues an interesting hobby. He makes attractive signs from match sticks by forming them into letters, gluing them on a board background and then painting the letters in a contrasting shade to the background. The ones sent in were very nice. Perhaps the idea might take with youthful globe trotters.

Jackie Rearick, of Verona, gave his parents some anxious hours the other day when he went adventuring. The father discovered him in the business section of the town, tired out, and resting on his wagon. Jackie claimed he wasn't lost—just sight seeing—and when mother said they were just about to call the police to hunt him his bright answer was,

"Oh, he knew where I was, I talked to him."

Noticing a little girl remove a robin's nest from its tree security, Mr. James suggests that the parents explain to their youngsters why the nests should not be removed.

One grandma globe trotter relates that while giving a 'gentleman of leisure' a cup of coffee he unfolded a paper to produce a sandwich. Last Sunday's picture was on that paper. She dashed to a neighbor's for cabbage plants and they were wrapped in the Globe Trotter's photo. Then to the service station for cleaning fluid—paper cork from the same picture. To the doctor's for a tonic—tonic bottle surrounded by our likeness. Sounds like a conspiracy.

TWO LEADING PASTORS HERE JOIN WAR ON RACKETEERS

URGE CHURCHES TO TAKE LEAD IN DRIVE

One was Dr. John Ray Ewers, pastor of the East End Christian Church, who, charging that racketeering is anarchy, said it is the place of the churches to lead in the fight against it.

The other was Dr. George W. Shelton, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, who said his life was safer in the missions of Turkey and Syria than it is outside his own door.

DEMAND SPREADS

A week has passed since William Randolph Hearst charged that the rackets are sucking at the life blood of the American nation. That week has seen politicians, ministers, police officials, judges and private citizens uniting in the cry to exterminate the racketeer.

Today Dr. Ewers said:

"The churches should take the lead in a drive like this, I think. They should take some action, instead of talking about a lot of old-fashioned orthodoxy that nobody cares about any more.

"Racketeering is nothing short of absolute anarchy.

"You cannot have government where you have people who take the law into their own hands—people strong enough in finance and in prestige to intimidate the officers of government.

"The sinister and influential forces controlling today's rackets, big and little—rackets of vice and rackets of business—are just like the cancer on a hand—either we must cut out the cancer or cut off the hand."

LIFE NOT SAFE

Joining Dr. Ewers, was Dr. Shelton, who said:

"This community in which we live is infested by the racketeers. Life is not safe here. I felt safer in Syria or Turkey than I do outside my own door.

"Of course the town ought to be rid of them. That's what we pay the police for, isn't it?

"There's no excuse for them whatsoever. They're vampires. They're leeches. They're sucking at the lifeblood of the people. They're dangerous to the community in which we live.

"The people must awaken to the danger presented by the residence of these beasts within our community. It is truly said by Mr. Hearst that we must get rid of them before they get rid of us."

'BROKE,' FORCED TO ABANDON 7

ERIE, Pa., April 29.—(INS.)—"What else can I do?"

County authorities today were faced with answering that question which has stumped Nick Farrio, 40, father of seven children.

Farrio led his offspring, the oldest 12 and the youngest 1, into the office of Deputy County Controller Rockwell Hart, left Hart a scrawled note, and departed, leaving the children. The note read:

"I can't support my children and my gas is going to be turned off. My wife has been to the hospital and has nothing to eat. We've got to move in a few days, where I don't know for we have no money. Take care of the kids, there are 7. I didn't mean to do it. What else can I do?"

Let the Democratic Party Be Democratic

licans unpopular without incurring the same unpopularity?

Do not the Democrats realize that the popularity they enjoy, the success they have achieved, is due entirely to the SINCERE PERFORMANCE OF THE ESSENTIALLY DEMOCRATIC PLEDGES MADE TO THE PEOPLE IN THE PLATFORM OF THEIR CHICAGO CONVENTION?

Why depart from that platform?

Why violate the essential spirit of that platform?

Why abandon democracy?

Why surrender Americanism?

Why diverge from the policies which have made the party successful?

Why reject the ideals which have made the nation great?

THE DEMOCRATIC party is dangerously close to treason in the course it is contemplating—treason to American institutions—treason to the elemental principles of democracy.

If the Democratic party proves faithless to its present trust, many and many a long year will pass before it is elected to office again.

It was Samuel J. Tilden who said the Democratic party will succeed when it has the courage to be democratic.

The Democratic party has succeeded by having the courage and the conscience to be democratic.

Why should it abandon the platform policies and the fundamental principles which have proved successful and nationally beneficial?

Why should it follow after strange gods when the tenets of its own faith have brought it to the land of promise?

Gentlemen of the Democratic Congress — be faithful to your pledges and your principles.

The country needs no dictatorship.

It direly needs genuine democratic government, and if you wish to look beyond your own country to a wider field, pray realize that here and now in your own land and in your own government lies the opportunity and the obligation to make democracy safe for a world burdened by despotism.

MAY DAY BANS TO CURB REDS

Associated Press.

The capital of Communism, Moscow, will run into as stiff competition as it ever encountered in seeking to set the pace Monday for international celebrations of May Day.

Dictatorial regimes in Austria and Germany have forbidden demonstrations by Communist or other Leftist elements.

While Moscow has its annual red army parade, cities of Germany will honor labor in strictly nationalistic style. The Hitler government has appropriated the holiday for its own.

In the United States and other countries, Communists are proceeding with plans for the holiday with governments taking only ordinary precautions to preserve peace.

The dictatorial regime in Cuba has forbidden any demonstrations, although authorizing a business holiday.

May Day Meeting Allowed; No Parade

Police Superintendent Franklin T. McQuaide late yesterday issued a permit to the United Front May Day Committee to hold a demonstration Monday afternoon in East Park, North Side. He refused, without comment, a permit for a downtown parade to precede the celebration.

The police head said he expected no trouble, but added that he would have sufficient police on hand to meet the situation.

SLEUTHS SEIZE BEER RICHES OF HASSELL

Universal Service.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 29.—Seeking to trace Waxey Gordon, fugitive racketeer, and to solve the Carteret Hotel murders, federal and state officials in New Jersey opened a veritable Pandora's box of trouble in the Elizabethport bank vaults last night.

Cash and securities totaling more than a quarter million dollars were discovered. Documents involving at least two bankers of northern New Jersey were seized.

The mass of money and certificates was placed there by Max Hassell, the Pennsylvania racketeer slain with Max Greenberg, another henchman of Waxey Gordon's syndicate, in the Carteret Hotel. The bank stands a few doors from the hotel.

Developments following the discovery of the secret treasure revealed that the gunmen who slew Hassell and Greenberg failed of their prime objective. The killers made the raid to wide out Gordon from racketeering permanently. Only the fact that he left the hotel, on a tip or by chance, saved him.

The chief racketeer, reputed to aspire to Capone's throne in the underworld, was declared officially to be interested in the Eureka Cereal Beverage Company, to which permits had been issued by the government.

HENRY TO STUDY VOTE CASES

Attorney John M. Henry, ousted several weeks ago as a member of the Registration Commission, today was to take up duties as a special representative of the County Commissioners to watch the county's interests in contests growing out of the November election. He will be an observer at the federal grand jury probe and cases in the local courts.

Henry, removed as a registration commissioner by Gov. Pinchot, has recently been an attorney for Mrs. Anne M. Felix, contesting the election of Congressman Michael Muldowney.

Henry's appointment was announced after a letter from Mrs. Felix had been read at the Commissioners' meeting, asking that the Commissioners interest themselves in the election disputes.

DOOMED PAIR'S ESCAPE FOILED

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 29.—(AP.)—Frank Stabinski and Anthony Tetrosky, condemned to die for beating to death Miss Mary Malinowski in a robbery, unsuccessfully tried to break from jail late yesterday.

Closely guarded on the return to the county prison after hearing the death sentence passed by two Judges, the pair simultaneously tried to grab the pistols of Deputies Samuel Francis and John McGuire. Deputy Sheriff Patsy Acquillan, to whom Stabinski was handcuffed, seized the prisoner's arm and pinned him against the wall. Tetrosky, manacled to Francis, attempted to seize the pistol strapped to McGuire's hip.

Father Teaches Boy To Smoke, Wife Sues

TOPEKA, Kan., April 29.—(AP.)—Alleging her husband taught their 4-year-old son to swear and smoke, Edna Anguish had filed suit today for a divorce from Donald Anguish.

What Are You Going To Do About It?

Following are yesterday's outstanding developments in the racket situation indicating its spread through various cities:

NEW YORK

General Sessions Judge Rosalsky commends District Attorney Crain's campaign against rackets and warns gangs they will get no quarter.

Seven prisoners held in bail for trial on charges of hurling stench bombs in establishments of button and fur manufacturers refusing to join their "associations."

Four men jailed by Brooklyn court for threatening a carpenter who refused to join their union.

NEW JERSEY

A search of a safe deposit box of Max Hassell, recently murdered Elizabeth beer racketeer and Waxey Gordon henchman, revealed $213,500 and a large sum of negotiable commercial paper. This paper included a $50,000 note from two prominent New Jersey bankers.

BOSTON

Evidence presented by the Boston American showing that more than 1,000 tailors have been threatened, bludgeoned and made to suffer losses through acid thrown on garments or through incendiary fires by a gang demanding their membership in a "protection association." The leader is a former Chicago racketeer.

CHICAGO

One fugitive wounded and another captured in gun fight between police and four terrorists in the cleaners' and dyers' racket. A shop owner fired at them. They sped away, firing back. A police squad engaged in a three-mile automobile race with them, exchanging shots. The gunmen later returned to the shop and were met by a police volley. One was caught. The others, one of whom was wounded, escaped.

GANG ABDUCTS LABOR LEADERS

CHICAGO, April 29.—(INS.)—Police received reports today that five members of the Touhy gang had kidnaped Fred Sass and Morris Goldberg, labor leaders, in a raid on the Ash Wagon Drivers' Union headquarters.

Detectives learned the men had been missing nearly 24 hours.

Five members of the Northwest Side gang which has been disputing the rule of the Capone syndicate staged a raid on the offices of the union early yesterday and, armed with machine guns, forced Sass and Goldberg to accompany them.

Taking charge of the headquarters for three hours, the gangsters lined 100 or more persons against a wall and herded them into a large room. They took prisoner every person entering the building.

Police learned the gangsters were led by Red Touhy, chief of the mob bearing his name.

BELLEVUE WINS MUSIC TITLES

The Bellevue High School Orchestra and Trio today were state champions of Class B High Schools. They won first place in competition with Class B school orchestras and trios from all parts of the state, last night in Sunbury. H. Ruehart is director.

The young musicians planned a campaign immediately to raise $1,500 to go to the World's Fair in Chicago for the national competition, June 2 and 3. Concerts will be held and other means adopted to finance the trip.

Conference Elects East End Minister

The Rev. David E. Maxwell, Mt. Zion East End Church, was named president of the Central Conference of the Pittsburgh Synod of the United Lutheran Church in America at the semi-annual convention, being held in St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Pitcairn. The Rev. G. Lawrence Himmelman, of the Emmanuel Church, Bellevue, was elected secretary, and the Rev. Fred C. Frommhagen, of St. Luke's, Millvale, treasurer.

TROOPS QUELL MINE BATTLE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 29.—(INS.)—Quiet was restored at the Woodside coal mine today following a battle between 400 progressive miners' union pickets and National Guardsmen augmented by police and deputy sheriffs.

Fifty militiamen with fixed bayonets subdued the picketers with a barrage of tear gas.

When 300 working miners, all members of the United Mine Workers of America, came up out of the pit after the day's work yesterday, they were met by the picketers at the mouth of the shaft.

BALLOT FRAUDS GOING TO U. S. GRAND JURY

Evidence of vote frauds gathered by government investigators in the Thirty-second and Thirtieth Congressional districts is expected to reach the new federal grand jury Thursday. Important figures in politics here are said to be involved.

Attorney Earl F. Reed, special prosecutor, will present the vote cases, assisted by United States attorneys. The evidence will deal with the counting of ballots in the Erk-Brooks and Felix-Muldowney fights, and has been gathered by Department of Justice investigators.

CONFESSIONS REPORTED

More than 100 confessions have been obtained, it is reported.

The special prosecutor was appointed at the request of E. Lowry Humes, of the Allegheny County Bar Association's clean elections committee, it has been revealed.

Humes said he made the request to the Attorney General because he felt that the same prosecutor should handle the case from the grand jury to its close.

REED READY

He pointed out United States Attorney Louis E. Graham will leave office next October, and many vote fraud cases will come up for trial in November.

Reed, who recently completed the prosecution in the Kline-Succop case, has said he is ready to proceed in the ballot box cases.

The special prosecutor and District Attorney, and the latter's first assistant, James I. Marsh, will confer today or Monday to set the day to open the inquiry.

Ingram School Tax Reduced Two Mills

The Ingram School Board last night fixed the 1933 school tax at 14 mills, a reduction of two mills, and abolishes the $1 per capita tax, C. A. Richards, president, announced.

MOTOR ROUTES TO BUTLER GIVEN

Journey Shortest Over Babcock Boulevard

With the closing of Route 8, the William Flinn highway, between Etna and Wildwood, and continuation of a detour from Wildwood to Cooperstown, motorists have been advised by the Pittsburgh Motor Club of several alternate routes to reach Butler from Pittsburgh.

The shortest and best road is the Babcock Boulevard to Valencia, over a "Pinchot" macadam road through Renfrew to Route 68 which leads to the right into Butler.

Driving toward Butler from Pittsburgh a right turn can be made to a macadam road north of Valencia leading to Route 8, open from that point to Butler. Another route is by way of KDKA Boulevard through Culmerville to Saxonburg and over a county road from that point into Butler.

A longer detour is by way of Route 19, the Perry Highway, to Zelienople turning right to Route 68 which leads to Butler.

Croatians to Hold Protest in Rankin

A protest meeting against Serbian influence in the Yugoslav government will be held by the Croatians of Rankin and vicinity in the Croatian Home, Fourth and Antisbury streets, Rankin, tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Romances galore are blossoming these warm spring days. Today I have news of another June wedding to add to the social calendar, that of a Southern girl and a Pittsburgh son.

The John Albert Woffords, of Laurens, S. C., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Maude Langston Wofford, to Chalmers Thomas Siviter, son of the Thomas Siviters, of Farragut street, East End.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Winthrop College, and Mr. Siviter of Amherst. Their wedding will take place Saturday, June 2, in the Little Church Around the Corner, New York.

Society is making the most of the remaining musical events of the season, before outdoor sports claim man, woman and child. The finale is rather magnificent with the International Grand Opera's trio of productions this week-end added to the many small musicales.

Trio of Operas

The Women's Auxiliary of Mercy Hospital sponsored the opening opera at Syria Mosque last night, "Aida," for the benefit of the hospital, of course.

"Faust" will be sung tomorrow afternoon, and "Carmen" tomorrow night.

* * *

Seen at Mosque

Miss Helen Rauh in blue lace and chiffon and Mrs. A. Leo Weil, another auxiliary member, were chatting with Mrs. Samuel H. Goldenson.

Dorothy Blaxter, who always attends all the concerts, was there in black satin with a perky little red velvet jacket, Mrs. Winfield K. Shiras, Mrs. Edmund Mudge, Miss Mary C. Murphy, Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock in nile green satin brocade, Mrs. Edward J. McCague in a flowered crepe, Louise Evans in white lace and her mother, Mrs. Henry Oliver Evans in black lace.

Petite Marie Louise Bickford, wearing blue lace, was with Fredericka Holdship, who wore blue, too; Mrs. William Larimer Mellon, Jr., in a heavy white crepe, her favorite color, was there, and so were the James Verner Scaifes with Mrs. Scaife wearing white satin with fur for decoration.

The final concert of the Yost String Quartet chamber music series will be held a week from tomorrow in the home of John C. Slack, "Brae Face," Edgeworth.

Miss Betty Quarrie, member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority, has been selected as the "Goddess" and her court will be Miss Betty Maus, Miss Dorothy Hargrave, Miss Eleanor Brankstone, Miss Marie Mericher and Miss Dorothy Lewis.

Fifteen dance events will comprise the program.

Margaret Hall Betrothed to G. H. Rieman

At a bridge party last evening formal announcement was made by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Hall, of McKees Rocks, of the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Margaret M. Hall, to Gustav H. Rieman, of New Haven, Conn.

Miss Hall is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, and her fiance of Ames College and the University of Wisconsin.

No date has been announced for the wedding.

La Fuyospo to Hold Swimming Party Tuesday

The La Fuyospo Club, of Homewood, is holding a swimming party Tuesday night in the Pittsburgh Natatorium. A spring dance is being planned for Saturday, May 20, to be held in Webster Hall, by the club.

Architects' Club To Hold Soiree This Evening

Tonight the Architectural Club in its picturesque clubhouse, Charette Way, will have a return engagement of the soiree charette, since so many of those attending the Junior League affairs and their friends clamored for another night in the Latin Quarter.

Last night the Gardens Club of Allegheny County had a night, and they surely enjoyed it. At one table were the Roy A. Hunts, the Norman McCleods, Dr. James D. Heard and the John Jay Heards.

Among those at Priscilla Barnes' table were the Charles Jarretts, Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Fetters. I saw Miss Dorothy Slack chatting at one of the gay tables with the Lucien Pattons, the Donald C. Bakewells, Mrs. Brandon Smith and R. E. Griswold.

Others there were Mrs. G. C. Kennedy, Mrs. Reed Kennedy, the Horace Forbes Bakers and the W. Eugene Garys, Mrs. W. Harry Brown and the junior C. A. Painters, who came from the opera.

Mrs. Harmar D. Denny, who is the mother of the new city director of public safety, Harmar D. Denny, Jr., and Mrs. W. Henry R. Hilliard, mother of the new city treasurer, H. Raymond Hilliard, were there, enjoying the Architects' night club.

The Joseph Dilworths, the T. A. Mellons, Mrs. Edwards A. Woods, the Charles H. Matthewses, Mrs. W. L. G. Gibson, Evelyn Evans, Alice Robinson, Miss Eleanor McChalfont, the Cyrus R. Millers also were there.

Miss Vogel to Address Wheeling Progressives

Miss Ella King Vogel, of Pittsburgh, will address the Wheeling Progressive Club, the junior business and Professional Women's Club, of the town, tomorrow morning at the club's emblem breakfast.

Miss Vogel has taken "The Major Chord" as her topic.

Marshall Bidwell, organist and musical director at Carnegie Institute, and Florence Fisher Parry, Pittsburgh columnist, will address the Tuesday Musical Club at its annual luncheon Tuesday in the University Club.

Mr. Bidwell will give his impressions of Pittsburgh as a music center and Mrs. Parry will discuss recent New York dramatic successes.

THE FLINN SISTERS AT FOX CHAPEL GOLF CLUB TALKING OVER GOLF LESSONS WITH THE PRO AS THE SEASON NEARS

THE SUB-DEBS ACCENT THEIR EVENING COTTONS WITH COLOR

WHAT A season this is for the sub-debutante! How lithe and lovely she looks in the crisp new cottons. For cotton, like a newly uniformed major, is marching into our midst for summer. Particularly intriguing are the soldiers of this queen's army, the organdies, the laces and the piques that go into young, evening dresses.

* * *

THE SUB-DEB lounging so blithely at the left wears one of the self-striped organdies. It's a breathlessly lovely thing in dusty pink, in fact so dainty to look at you might say "pouf" and blow it quite away. And you may as well know right now that quantities of the smartest evening things will accent their shoulders . . . with ruffles, with frills, with ruches and with all sorts of "fallals" that make you look very good little girls.

* * *

THE WINSOME frock in the center is of cotton lace, blue as the Mediterranean and smartly accented around the middle with a red cire sash. Cire, incidentally, is getting a big hand this new season, particularly in these little-girl sashes.

* * *

PIQUE CONTINUES smart for evening, as is demonstrated by the jacket with the pagoda shoulders at the right. A number of these crisp white evening jackets are shown to be worn with printed or bright colored frocks. In this case the dress is of plaid organdie, so bold in pattern that it bears out the latest fashion edict that "it is conventional to be extreme" this season.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

The Thomas J. Ingrams' gardener had spent hours collecting stones to encircle the lily pond on the Ingrams' Woodland road place, and when he finished the work this week, departed, feeling proud of his handiwork. But the next time he saw the lily pond, every stone was gone.

Little Virginia Ingram and a young playmate had thrown them all into the pond in a contest to see which could make the loudest splash!

Some of Pittsburgh's young daughters are going to take up golf this summer. Mrs. Simon T. Patterson is considering a course of lessons from the Fox Chapel Golf Club pro for her young daughter, Nancy, as well as herself.

The committee on arrangements, headed by Capt. James I. Martin, includes Maj. Lloyd Corkan, Capt. J. P. Maloney, Capt. E. C. Thomas, Lieut. Arthur Symons and Lieut. W. W. Kinkel.

Anti-aircraft regiments with headquarters in Pittsburgh include the 503rd, 508th and 523rd, of the Coast Artillery Corps, U. S. Army.

Bellevue Literary Club Topic to Be Aviation

Like its neighboring organization, the Outlook Club, the Bellevue Literary Club will have aviation as its study theme when it meets Tuesday afternoon in the American Legion Home.

The Literary Club members are calling their program "Wings of Tomorrow" and will hear a paper on "Aerial Photography" by Mrs. D. M. Sloane; another on "Along the World's Airways," by Mrs. P. S. Spangler, and a third, by Mrs. F. G. Helme, on "Women in Aviation."

Congress Reports Given at D. A. R. Gathering

At the close of yesterday's meeting of Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. W. Harry Brown entertained the executive board members at tea in the Hotel Schenley.

At the meeting, reports of the forty-second Continental Congress were made by the regent, Mrs. William Jackson Crittenden, and Miss Sarah E. Bissell, Mrs. J. Evon Nelson, Mrs. Howard N. Eavenson, Mrs. James B. Eisaman and Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh.

These reports told of the decoration of the president general, Mrs. William Russell Magna, by the French ambassador; that Pittsburgh Chapter was commended for its outstanding work among the Sons and Daughters of the Republic clubs, and that $24,000 was collected during the convention for the debt on Continental Hall.

Mention also was made of the fact that 1,900 copies of the D. A. R. Magazine go to foreign countries.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

DES MOINES, Ia., April 29.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Now this aviation is getting somewhere. Traveling East to do a broadcast. On a Democratic President on President's Day evening. Am on one of the new Boeing ships, two-motored (not three), 16-passenger. And it really has speed for a big ship, cruises 180.

Will Rogers

You see, all our advancement in speed has been made with small, single-motored ships. But now they are all out to cut down the flying time at least a third. And by the way, the old railroad could grab off many a new customer if they would knock a third off their schedules, which they could do. There never was such a demand for speed, for less reason.

There is not a one of us that couldn't walk where we are going, and then get there earlier than we have any business. Yours,

WILL.

State Institute Chairman Gives Address Before County Federation

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

It seemed most appropriate that the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs should bring Mrs. Alfred A. Crooks, State Federation Club Institute chairman, here for a talk on club management and club procedure just as the county clubs are all going into new administrations.

The time has come when club women should learn the issues before them, Mrs. Crooks said. She "diagnosed" the word "pep" to mean preparation, enthusiasm and procedure and then went on to give some instructions concerning club procedure and to discuss four things in club management—officers, membership, ethics and programs.

In addition to her talk there was a musical program of exceptional merit by Viola K. Byrgerson, contralto, Marion Clark Bollinger accompanying and Frank Kennedy, organist. C. A. McClintock, of the National Economy League, stated briefly and concisely the aims of his organization.

The North Hills Woman's Club, which has grown from 35 to 200 members in three years, was the hostess club and entertained nearly 300 guests in the Glenshaw Community Church. In the morning the president, Mrs. Robert K. Cochrane, Sr., was introduced by the retiring president, Mrs. H. J. Fox. The invocation was offered by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Robert S. Young. Assembly singing was led by Mrs. Robert L. Finlayson, new county chairman of music, and a sextet from the Woman's Club of Homestead sang a group of songs. New officers and committee chairman were presented.

Mrs. James Graham Chalfant, southwestern district president of the State Federation, introduced Mrs. Crooks.

Aspinwall Club Plans Extra Affairs

A number of events in addition to the regular departmental meetings promise an interesting and full month for the Aspinwall Woman's Club.

There's a guest night scheduled for Friday, the regular club meeting on the eighteenth, a scholarship benefit skating party at the National Park Rink, on the nineteenth in charge of the educational department, an evening when the Aspinwall Men's Club will entertain the Woman's Club members (you see the men meet in the clubhouse) a sunshine luncheon and a garden party.

Although the garden party is dated for June 15, it is included in this month's bulletin as is the sunshine luncheon, on June 1, when officers will be elected and annual reports heard. Miss Emily Wilson, of the National Better Magazines Council, is to address the monthly meeting and the club choral will sing.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Otis is to speak "In Praise of Gardens" and the Fellowship Four Quartet will furnish the music for guest night on Friday.

Pitt Man Wins Stage Model Contest

Kenneth Turney, of the University of Pittsburgh, won the Lane Thompson Memorial prize in the stage model contest conducted by the Pittsburgh Drama League. George M. P. Baird was given the Kaufmann prize.

The awards were made last night before the close of the league's ninth amateur players' contest in the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Theater.

Special mention was given Saul Casarsky, of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, and commendation was given the work of Willi Behrse, of Carnegie Institute of Technology; Miss Luise Link, Pennsylvania College for Women, and Samuel Moyer, of the University of Pittsburgh.

The most closely contested decision ever awarded in the history of league contests gave the first prize of $100 and the Samuel French trophy to the Settlement Players for their performance of "Prom Night," the George S. Kaufmann unpublished play, which won first prize in the Settlement's own play-writing contest.

The second prize of $50 was awarded last night to the Emerson Club, of Sacred Heart Church, seen in Barrie's "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals." The Dracomtra Players and the Bellefield Mimes tied for third place and honorable mention went to the Masquers of Calvary Church and the Studio Players, of Bradford Woods.

For the second time the Gargoyle Club, of Shady Side Academy took the Mrs. Frank R. Wheeler trophy for its work in Ray Hurd's "Sing, You Sinner." The Swiss Thespians were a close second. Special mention for individual acting was given to Frances Heckert, of the Mimes; Albert Morris, of the Settlement Players; Joseph O'Brien, of the Thespians, and Leonora Malakoff, of the "Y" Children's Theater.

Edgewood Acres Club to Plant Hillside

The hillside along Ardmore boulevard will be planted Thursday afternoon by junior and senior members of the Edgewood Acres Branch of the National Farm and Garden Association under the leadership of Mrs. P. H. Brace.

Poppy, petunia, cosmos and hollyhock seeds will be planted. The senior members are to hear a talk by Mrs. Elsie McFate on "The Woman and Her Garden" prior to the planting.

Plans are being made for the annual spring flower show, set for June 1 at the Hawthorne School and another activity is a plant exchange between the members with Mrs. E. H. Lamberger and Mrs. C. C. MacMillan in charge.

Does Any Girl Who Is Worthy Of Respect Get It?

Is it a girl's own fault if men insult her?

A Modern Man says it is.

"Five Skeptical Girls" started the argument. According to them, life was just one degrading proposition after another. Weren't there any regular gentlemen left whom a sweet, innocent young thing could trust? They wanted to know and, if possible, would we include the address? So, sez he—

Dear Elsie:

Okay! Here's an answer to those "Five Skeptical Girls" who wrote to you about how terrible Modern Men are. They asked for it, and they're going to get it! Their own satirical little masterpiece hangs them!

Just what do you mean by "Modern Men," girls? Men are men, and gentlemen are gentlemen today, just as they were 50 years ago. Of course, the male of the species can't always be termed a gentleman—and a woman is not always real, or a lady.

You say you are "modern to the Nth degree," and you "know where to draw the line." Sure. But just where do you draw that line? The man, and I use that term in its true sense, doesn't exist, who makes it necessary for a real woman to even draw a line. Nor is he "always on the grab," as you say.

You girls get just what you ask for. Think that over.

The decent little miss of today is accorded the same respect that her grandmother got back in the "days of chivalry." Respect commands respect and familiarity breeds contempt.

WRONG IMPRESSIONS

"We've had experience with plenty of them," you say.

I wonder just what occasioned these experiences. Flirting, coquetry, properly employed, is rather delightful and amusing, but it can be carried too far. You can be nice without being forward—and if you are nice, you'll be respected.

Many college graduates are gentlemen. I am both a college graduate and a Christian, American gentleman. But all sheepskins do not include those titles, of course, although the majority do.

So, if you girls don't get treated the way you think you should be treated, look yourselves over.

It is quite likely that you give men a wrong impression about yourselves. So do a little critical work on yourselves before you start in blaming the men for not treating you as nice girls should be treated.

It's a girl's own fault if men don't treat her with respect. Fit yourselves out with those qualities that you expect the men to show and you'll discover the solution of your difficulties.

RETURNS COURTESY

And as for the men thinking you're Gold Diggers—well, I have yet to shiver in fear of being "hooked" or "played for" when I accepted a girl's invitation to her home for an evening. Neither do I consider her a Gold Digger when I take her out for dinner and dancing. It is a pleasure to return her courtesy. So look to yourselves, girls. Any girl worthy of respect will get it.

A MODERN MAN.

"Any girl worthy of respect will get it?" I wonder.

I've heard that before. In fact, it was one of the older generation's best arguments, and perhaps it was true in the good old days when they kept ladies under glass. But is it true now?

How many bewildered youngsters have complained to you that 'the boys won't date them unless they act like hot numbers"?

Yet, on the other hand, how many comments do you hear from really nice fellows about the way the modern girl dresses, makes up and acts? And you've watched the merry little misses with their teasing little waggles! Now, would you or wouldn't you say they were asking for insults?

So, come on! Let's hear your opinion.

"COMPLICATIONS"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Both Spring-Fever and Love-Blindness, and temperature going up every minute!" Eros writes this down on his little chart in April, when the case is a pair of young married lovers, and the time is Spring.

To be in love in the Spring! The old gentleman in the chimney corner, who cannot get his dear old shin-bones warm even by the roaring chestnut logs, but whose heart is warm when Spring comes round again, says, says he to himself, "I would be happy, I would, to go back and be a Spring-lunatic such as these fond ones, burning with the fever of the trail to the country beside the smiling young thing I loved and who loved me, afflicted with Love's blindness so that I could not see either the faults in the adventurer beside me or those in the dreams we dreamed. It's a sweet fever, and a grand blindness, as I remember, and well worth the pains and the youngness!"

The Spring-fever in lovers is a mixture of love and country-homesickness. And love's blindness is too well-known to bother defining. You know from coming through it safely yourself how it can make a crooked nose appear straight, and neutral hair gold as honey! You know that it can make the little tumble-down farmhouse that they have bought look like a Priscilla and John Alden picture-book house, all green and white and flower-grown! Spring-fever makes lovers long to hold hands in the country—and nowhere else will do. The farmhouse of dreams appears as one of the first delusions. And the blindness laid on their young bright eyes wreaths one another and the little house in the perfections and the flowers of early Eden.

What if the little house IS tumble-down! The pink snow of the apple tree that spreads its lace beside it is REAL. What if John is plain and there is a depression. The golden-apple of happiness they have is no delusion.

The fever and blindness of Love and Spring can make anything of a man and a woman, and can rebuild the most decayed of little old houses.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

Condolence Call

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.

The other day an acquaintance died and I called to pay my respects to the family. There was no attendant at the door when I arrived. I did not know the other members of the family so I did not feel that I should walk in without ringing the bell. Was it proper to ring the bell, or should I have walked in without ringing the bell? C.

The best thing to do when we are making a call of condolence is to ring the bell and to leave our card with whoever answers the bell. This is especially true when we do not know the people very well. Such a visit registers our sympathy and respects, and still does not intrude.

Invitation Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a girl 16 years of age and I have quite a few boy friends and girl friends. Our class in school is giving an invitation party and we are going to a neighboring town. I am in doubt as to whom I should invite.

There is a young man who is friendly and always speaks to me when we meet on the street. I have been told that this young man would like to "keep company" with me, but as yet he has never asked me to go anywhere with him. Would it be all right and proper to invite this young man to go? M.

Since you know so many other boys, it would seem logical for you to invite one of these friends of longer acquaintance. The social timidity of the young man who hasn't made any gesture to you except a bow on the street doesn't seem to rate this invitation from you.

Correct Form of Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I have had an argument with a friend of mine because for Christmas they sent a card to my folks . . . by my folks I mean Mother, Father, two brothers and two sisters, over 21 years of age, and a baby sister, all at home. They sent a card addressed like this:

Mr. So and So and family

Of course I know that it is wrong to put "and family," but I realize that they couldn't send five cards to my family so I overlooked that. Isn't it correct, in this case to put

Mr. and Mrs. So and So and family

The way they put it, it looked as though my father was a widower and I had no mother.

2—I would like to know if it is wrong, when having three couples for dinner, to have them seated so that a husband is not his wife's partner or across from each other, so that they are mixed and will become better acquainted? My friend says that a husband should sit across from his wife and they should be partners. B.

1—I agree with you about the omission of Mrs. from the address on the envelope. The card should have been addressed to Mr. and Mrs.

The use of the phrase and family is not in good form. If

Mr. and Mrs. George Allen
The Misses Allen
The Messrs. Allen

More personal, this, and in better form.

2—You are right about this. At a dinner the husband and wife should not be seated next to each other, nor is it necessary to seat them opposite each other.

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

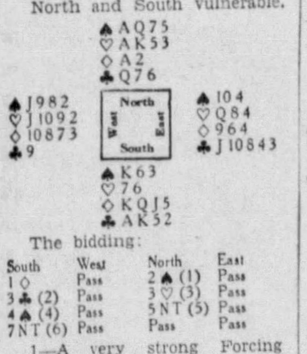
The Grand Slam Convention

Unquestionably the most popular Slam bidding convention is the Four-Five Notrump Convention, a part of the Culbertson System used for the purpose of showing Aces in wholesale lots, which practically assures the coaching of all biddable Grand Slams and avoiding Grand Slams when the trick-taking power of the hand is limited to six.

A hand which combines fine Approach bidding with a bidding situation in which the expert revels was played recently by Mr. Ray H. Eisenlord, of Erie, Pa., who held the North hand shown below:

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠ (1)	Pass
3 ♣ (2)	Pass	3 ♡ (3)	Pass
4 ♠ (4)	Pass	5 N T (5)	Pass
7 N T (6)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A very strong Forcing Takeout.

2—Showing a second biddable suit.

3—There is no need to hurry, so North also discloses his second suit.

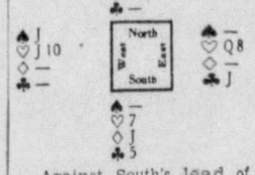
4—With South's strong hand, a Raise to four spades is fully justified.

5—Announcing that the hand contains three Aces and the King of a bid suit.

6—South's hand is too strong to stop short of a Grand Slam.

When the Dummy went down, Mr. Eisenlord could count 12 tricks in top cards—three spades, two hearts, four diamonds and three clubs. It is a rule of the play of the hand, not the exception, that when one side can win the first twelve tricks, an additional trick can be made by a squeeze if the hand patterns of the partners are dissimilar. While North realized the dangers of unfavorable distribution, he was not at all discouraged in his hope that a Grand Slam might be made.

The Opening lead was a club, which was won in Dummy, and then an effort was made to break the spades, only to learn that West held four in that suit. Next the club suit was continued, with, it must be confessed, slight hope of success, and all hope was dashed when West failed to follow suit on the second lead. However, the third club was cashed, a round of hearts taken, and then followed 4 diamond tricks, which placed the lead in Dummy at the eleventh trick, with the situation below, which Bridge players designate as a triple squeeze:



Against South's lead of the diamond Knave, West had no defense. He must part with a heart as he knew the Declarer had a good spade. Upon this the spade 7 was discarded in the closed hand, as that card was now valueless. However, the squeeze was still effective. East had to choose between retaining the club Knave and giving up defense in hearts. Whichever course was followed, the Grand Slam could not be defeated.

TODAY'S QUESTION

South opens with a bid of one heart and West bids one spade. What bid, if any, should North make with the following hand?

♠ — ♡ 9 8 3 2 ◇ 8 7 5 3 ♣ J 10 9 6 2

Answer: Two hearts. Ordinarily a hand should contain at least 1 honor-trick for a free Raise. However, an exception can be made because of the void in the adversely bid suit as there is little danger of overlapping strength. Incidentally, the hand contains 4½ plus tricks in support of hearts.

Heart of a Wife

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Ronald and Madge Prepare Road Markers

"What do you mean?" Ronald stopped short on the mountain trail and asked me that question, when I told him triumphantly that there would be a trace of Owen's car left for me, if he succeeded in the plan he had just outlined—that of making a sprint and swinging himself to the back of the car to which we were sure Owen meant to transfer Marion. "You've thought of something," he added breathlessly.

"Yes, I have," I answered, "but we mustn't stop. I'll tell you about it as we go along. But, first, have you a knife with you?"

"Yes." As we began walking again he thrust his hand in his pocket and brought out a small knife.

"Shall I open it?"

"Please; and then will you fill your pockets with small pieces of rock—nothing over the size of a walnut. Try to do it without stopping. Can you?"

"Yes," he said as he handed me the knife, and the next instant stooped to the trail and picked up some small stones. I had whipped off a long silk scarf, which I had put on under my coat when I started for the school at Mrs. Barnes' summons, and as soon as I had the knife in my hand I slit a small piece from it, not quite the size of a small child's handkerchief. As Ronald raised himself with the stones, I held out the jagged piece to him.

PREPARE MARKERS

"Did you ever tie a nickel in your kerchief when you went to the candy shop?" I asked.

"Yes. Oh! I see. What a swell idea!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "You want me to tie a stone in this."

"One or more, as many as the piece will hold securely," I told him, slitting another piece from the scarf. "If we work fast, you will be able to fill your pockets with these things. Then after you swing yourself upon the back of Owen's car—"

"You mean if I manage that," he interrupted hesitatingly.

"No. I do not mean 'if.' I mean 'when,' and so must you."

"Please forgive me!" he pleaded. "I must seem a sad coward to you."

"Stop that sort of talk this instant," I scolded. "It isn't true, and we haven't time for it. Now, as I was saying, after you swing yourself on the back of Owen's car, watch carefully the corners he turns. As long as he continues on the straight road, do nothing; but as soon as he turns a corner, throw one of these little missles to the right of the road, just missing the road bed if you can. We do not wish to run any risk of a car hitting it and spinning it into a ditch, or tearing the cloth loose from the pebble for the wind to blow away.

REPEATS DIRECTIONS

"Follow the same course on the second road. Drop nothing unless he turns a corner, then be sure that you throw it to the right of the road. You'll forgive me, I know, if I ask you to repeat those directions. So much may depend upon my being able to trail you."

"But I want to repeat them more than once," Ronald said earnestly. "I'm sorry I don't know which way I'm headed, and I'm likely to forget my own name. I'll just keep saying that to myself every minute or two. 'Nothing on the straight road, but throw one of these things to the right of the road as soon as we turn a corner. And try to have them just clear the road bed.' Is that right?"

"You are letter perfect," I told him. Then we said nothing more aloud, but we both worked feverishly at slitting my scarf into bits, tying up the pebbles in the pieces and filling every pocket Ronald had with them. We had only just finished when Ronald touched my arm and pointed up to where the autogyro was whirring.

"I believe they've spotted something," he said.

I looked up and saw that the queer little machine, with its strange wings whirring like mad on top of it, had ceased describing a large circle, and was going round and round a narrow circuit whose center was a point only a few rods distant from us.

Household Hints

Sandpaper baby's new shoes on the soles and he will not slip and fall so much.

Save the water that you pour off from spaghetti. Keep it in a corked bottle, and use it for starching linens, etc.

Eggs for poaching should be put in boiling water for a few seconds before cracking the shells. This prevents the yolks from breaking.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Purpura Is a Baffling Affliction

Not so long ago I told you about a disease called "hemophilia." This strange and unusual disease is often confused with another blood disturbance called "purpura hemorrhagica." So many inquiries have come to me about hemophilia and purpura that it seems desirable to go somewhat into detail regarding these two disorders.

Dr. Copeland

Sufferers from hemophilia are called 'bleeders." They bleed easily upon the slightest bruise or injury. Bleeders are found in certain families. It is a hereditary disease. It is true that the victim of purpura bleeds easily, too; but the bleeding is usually confined to the tissues of the body and the blood does not appear externally. Fundamentally, the diseases are quite different and each requires its distinct treatment.

The cause of purpura and hemophilia are not known. Hemophilia differs from purpura in that it has been found only in males of the white race. It is hereditary, being transmitted through the maternal side of the family. Though daughters will not have the affliction, they may transmit it to their male children.

Once the disease has become established in a family it will persist until that family becomes extinct. The bleeding may be severe and even fatal. Hemorrhages may be traced to slight and almost insignificant injuries. Fortunately, the strange and unusual disease is a rare affliction of mankind.

Prolonged and severe hemorrhages may occur in purpura as well as in hemophilia. In purpura the bleeding comes on suddenly and may occur in any of the tissues of the body. Hemorrhages may occur beneath the skin and produce many black and blue marks all over the body. The bleeding may continue for days or weeks and sometimes proves fatal.

Purpura cannot be traced to any family trait. The sufferer bruises easily, and has noticed excessive bleeding upon the slightest injury. Unlike hemophilia, the disease is not always fatal. In fact, within recent years great strides have been made in the treatment of this disease, as well as in the control of hemophilia.

As I have suggested, the victim of this disease may be unaware of his affliction. In former years sufferers from hemophilia and purpura accidentally learned of their misfortune.

Nowadays it is common practice to conduct a simple test on all children and adults who are suspected of having either one of these diseases. It prevents the calamity of fatal bleeding caused by an operation or accident. The test is called the "bleeding and coagulation test." It is a simple procedure and is a reliable means of discovering unsuspected cases of hemophilia and purpura.

There still remains a great deal to be learned about such mysterious and baffling diseases. Let us hope for the continued success of those scientists who have devoted their lives to the solving of this problem. Suspected cases of purpura and hemophilia require immediate attention. Bear in mind that neglect is dangerous. Every effort should be made to take advantage of all that modern science has contributed for the control of purpura and hemophilia.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When white hair stays persistently yellow, try the white of egg shampoo. Use six egg whites, beat slightly, add a tablespoonful of cold water. Rinse the hair, apply part of the eggs, friction to a foam. Rinse, use the rest of the eggs, give a final rinsing. Pouring over the head a pint of water to which a few drops of bluing have been added will complete the good work.

Eye strain is relieved by proper glasses. It is something that should be attended to, since it causes the eyes to squint, and squinting is the direct cause of crowsfeet and turkey tracks. If lines have already taken a leasehold, apply a heavy cream at night, pressing the fingers gently over the eyelid from nose to temple, coming back underneath to starting point. Once or twice a day iron with ice or apply cold compresses.

Dad and the Little Fellow

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

It is the wise father who realizes that he cannot ignore his son when the chap is a little fellow and then expect to enjoy the boy's companionship when he grows to a man's stature.

I enjoyed a short tableau recently. Dad, on his Saturday half-holiday, decided to go over his car, inside and out. Three-year-old Benny tagged along eagerly. Now a lot of dads would have thought that Benny was nothing so much as hindrance to work. But Benny's dad thought differently.

First of all the car had to be pushed ahead a little and Benny set his diminutive shoulder at the back of the car just like dad. "Don't strain yourself," dad cautioned him. "She rolls easily." Dad did all the pushing, of course, but when the car had gone ahead a few feet, Benny stood off and regarded its position with great gravity. "Think we've got her far enough, Dad?" Dad regarded the car seriously, too. "No," he replied, "I don't. Let's give her another little push." Benny applied himself full strength.

When the car was in shipshape, dad said: "What do you think about something to eat, son? I'm hungry." "So am I," said Benny. "We've been working hard, haven't we?"

And the pride and happiness in Benny's voice as he boasted that they had spent an hour shoulder to shoulder, pushing, washing, polishing, was worth all the time his dad spent in explaining, re-doing some work, and allowing the child to be a real companion to him. That father will never hear with amazement of something his son has done for that son will talk it over with dad first—dad will be his best pal. And that, to my mind, is worth striving for.

Disillusion

Oh, once I loved you so, your name,
Spoken, fanned my cheeks to flame!
If unexpectedly we'd meet
All my soul was steeped in sweet,
Sudden, rapturous ecstasy
That you could not fail to see.

Discuss the weather . . rush away
To keep engagements. Gray or gold
The day, we know it not . . . nor care
You once were dear . . I once was fair.

. . . It is not years that make us old!

Have you heard about the stage actress, now in movies, who from force of habit sent herself a large basket of flowers at a Los Angeles theater when her first flicker opened there?

As If You Didn't Know

Izzy Ellinson observes that the dollar dropped—but that won't bother the Broadway phonies. They don't care how low they have to stoop to get it.

Izzy also reports that when Gracie Allen read the news about the dollar taking a dive, she wired President Roosevelt: "Don't worry—it couldn't have rolled far!"

Helen Morgan is not a person to be frightened by theatrical trade paper solicitors. One of them entered her undressing room the other day and with the manners of a thug, said:

"How about taking out a subscription to our paper? Cost you $100 for 10 years."

"I'm very sorry," said Miss Morgan, "but no. I never read your sheet, because it never has any funnies."

How to Get Gray Young

"Walter Winchell recently said over the air that if Joan and Doug get a divorce, the chatter writers will be responsible. It was a serious accusation."

Walter Winchell never said that. Walter Winchell said that Joan and Doug said that. And he is tired of being a proof-reader, too!

We recently reported that Greta Garbo's manager in Hollywood had denied that Greta was on the freighter due soon on the coast. And that two Los Angeles columnists had also reported Greta was not on any boat. The following letter explains itself:

"The famous cinema actress, Greta Garbo, passed Puerto Colombia on a Johnson liner last week and caused a great deal of interest among the people of that town. At Cartagena she appears to have met newspaper reporters and talked of coming to that city to produce a picture. Yours very truly, C. H. G. Pearsall, vice president, Colombian Steamship Company.

Jerome K. Jerome once related that Shaw told him he had only three speeches. One about politics, including religion; about art, together with life in general, and the other one about himself.

He said he found these three, with variations, served him for all purposes.

"People think I make new speeches," Shaw groaned. "I'm repeating things I have told them over and over again. If only they had listened! I'm tired of talking. I wouldn't have to talk one-tenth as much if people only listened!"

Sleep, as Mr. Shaw himself once said, when he stifled a young playwright, is also an opinion.

Story of War Jigsawed In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

At last the Jig Saw Puzzle craze has struck Hollywood, and a fine example of it, called "Today We Live," was shown at the Penn Theater yesterday, with Joan Crawford doing most of the living. Based on a story by William Faulkner, one of those newer authors who write in dashes and splashes, this picture romance flounders about for reel after reel, while the worshipers in the pews wonder who's who and what's what.

Mr. Seibel

Out of the jig saw pile of incidents and characters at last emerge three men around Joan. Two of the men love her, and she loves them alternately when either is reported killed and the third man is her brother. Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone and Robert Young all play well, but spend most of their time zooming about in airplanes or swishing along in torpedo boats.

It's that kind of picture.

With some very beautiful scenic backgrounds and a gorgeous rainstorm, with minor bits admirably played by actors doing their best, with many crowd scenes splendidly directed and photographed, the whole picture is hopelessly muddled. You don't care who marries Joan or whether she dies old maid or widow. Big ships are sunk and airplanes shot down, and you only wonder why Hollywood should go to all this expense and trouble to illustrate a story so utterly jumbled and hopelessly dull.

Joan Crawford does a lot of emoting, and everybody seems to be worried about something most of the time. But it's not very clear what all the trouble is, who loves whom or why, and maybe the idea of it all is to make the audience believe they are shell-shocked and have to put together a jigsaw puzzle by William Faulkner. We give it up!

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, gives a farewell talk to the American people, in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, and thanks them for the cordiality shown him and his daughter, Ishbel, during their stay here.

What is declared to be the closest horse race ever run comes from Flemington, Australia. Ten of 20 starters remain tightly bunched together, noses practically even. A few yards before the post is reached, the favorite, Tropical, suddenly plunges forward to win by a half a head. The Globe Trotter describes it.

In honor of President's Day, Sunday, April 30, Everett Marshall, baritone, sings a new song, "I Am An American," composed by Mrs. Marie Theresa Laing, to the accompaniment of the famous Vincent Lopez orchestra.

Tense Drama In Warner

By MARY SHINE

Ten well-known modern authors collaborated to write a rip-snortin' murder mystery, and from it has been made as intense and exciting a picture of that type as Paramount has produced for some time. It is called "The Woman Accused," and Nancy Carroll and Cary Grant have the leading roles.

A woman in love, the man she wants to marry threatened with death by the man in her past, sudden panic, she kills the villain—that is the plot.

Nancy and Cary leave on a three day cruise with a party of friends. The prosecuting attorney (John Halliday) a friend of the murdered man, boards the boat, and plays a game of cat and mouse with Nancy, to make her confess.

He uses every trick he knows to break down her defense, and after other ruses fail, arranges a mock murder trial with Nancy as the defendent. She becomes hysterical, and almost confesses. She finally tells Cary, who, acting as her lawyer, engages in a battle of wits with the prosecuting attorney to save her. He actually does free her, without a trial although he and the lawyers know she is guilty, and just how he does it, is unfolded for you in the Warner.

Raft to Stay Bad Boy

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, April 29.—They are determined to keep George Raft on Broadway and to keep him bad! About May 22, he will play one of the important roles, the thief, in "Chrysalis," a stage play of the big town that Paramount has decided to make.

With George will be two other players whose personalities seem to flourish in urban settings. They are Miriam Hopkins and Fredric March. Miriam will play the prim welfare woman's daughter who rebels against repression and steps out to taste life. Fredric will be seen as the man-about-town who helps her to dig out what a young girl shouldn't know.

Raft will play a crook again, this time a petty-larcener who invites much sympathy and who dies at the end. One more important role, the thief's girl friend, remains to be cast.

"Chrysalis" is the play by Rose Albert Porter that had a vogue on Broadway several seasons back. It is an easy guess that the title will be changed.

George Raft has been shying at heavy parts lately, so this new role must have plenty of audience sympathy in it to reconcile him.

Worthy Bill In Davis

By WILLIAM T. SCHOYER

Excellently produced, "Rome Express" misses no glamorous detail of continental European travel as the crack train, with its smart little world of passengers, pulls out of Paris. First excitement centers on a couple trying to conceal their forbidden romance. Then, never jarring, the tempo is increased—a double-crossing thief with a stolen picture, French detective, movie actress confronted with her past, a poker game with death holding the cards, and, as the train roars up the slopes to Italy—murder.

"Humanity," co-feature, is a touching drama of a doctor's devotion to the ideals of his profession, even to the sacrifice of his good name to teach his son its worth. The son, Alexander Kirkland, finds his only way to make medicine pay enough to satisfy a society sweetheart in secret operations on wounded gangsters. This brings in shooting, abrupt and vivid, as is almost all the film.

Ralph Morgan, father, dominates the show, which will bring tears to many eyes. Boots Mallory is the girl.

End of the Trail

HOME AGAIN. Back to the exact spot from which I started, seven months ago. Back to Broadway, otherwise known as Buzzard Boulevard. Back to the chorus girls with the dying mothers and the chorus boys with the dyed hair. Back to the orange juice stands that put oranges on the counters and omit them in the glasses. Back to the avenue where no star shines forever and Paradise is a cafe.

Home again. Back to lovers who met, husbands who cheat and wives who bleat. Back to the land of tips, sips, gyps, pips, lips and hips. Back to hot mammas, cold mammas, sweet mammas, pretty mammas; everything but real mammas. Back to the street of introducers, producers and reducers. Back to the narrow alley of lights, slights, spites, fights and tights.

Home again. Back to faces that thrill and paces that kill. Back to the Follies, the dollies, the ragmen and the gagmen. Back to the paste jewels and the chased fools. Back to the prize fleas, the knock knees, the book shops, the hook shops, the elbow benders and the gossip venders.

Home again. Back to the thoroughfare where tearing the other fellow down is a greater pleasure than building yourself up. Back to the boulevard where blessings breed bitterness—and religion reports only if there is a promise that prayer will perhaps pay.

Home again. Back to the spot where—if you are decent——you are a fool. And if you are indecent, you are depraved. If you are honest, you are robbed. And if you are dishonest, you go to jail. If you spend your money, you are a waster. And if you don't you are a tightwad. If you fall madly in love, you are a sucker. And if you don't, you're queer.

Home again. Back to the land where—if you produce a failure—you are a bum. And if you produce a success, you are lucky. If you are too friendly with people, they say you're a bore. And if you're not too friendly, they call you high-hat. If you write a bad column, people say you're slipping. And if you write a good one, they say you stole it.

Home again—on Broadway. And am I glad to be here? You can bet your sweet life I am . . .

It has been a long trip. Just to keep the records straight, here's the way it went:

From New York, I went to Italy. From Italy to Tunis. From Tunis to France. From France to Germany. From Germany to Czechoslovakia. From Czechoslavkia to Austria. From Austria to Hungary. From Hungary to Jugo-Slavia. From Jugo-Slavia to Greece. From Greece to Turkey. From Turkey to Egypt.

From Egypt to Palestine. From Palestine to French Somaliland. From French Somaliland to India. From India to Burma. From Burma to Siam. From Siam to the Straits Settlements. From the Straits Settlements to Java. From Java to Bali. From Bali to the Celebes Islands. From Celebes Islands to the Phillipines.

From the Philippines to China. From China to Japan. From Japan to Hawaii. From Hawaii to San Francisco. From San Francisco to New York. From New York to Bad. From Bad to Worse. And from Worse to Winchell.

Long? Brothers and sisters, let me tell you right here and now that it was even longer than that. The beginning wasn't so bad, but the ending was tough. Seven months! Why, I'm all out of touch with the old routine. I'll bet it will be all of a week before I can hammer out one of those columns about the chorine who took gas because her sweetie took the air, or about the noble cop who killed himself rather than take a $5 bribe from the speakeasy owner.

But it's swell to be back. Really it is. Everybody's been so grand. The boys in the box offices. The porters around the theaters. The mugs in the barber shop. Even the managing editor had a smile for me—and when a managing editor smiles at a columnist, that's history.

And then—home. Home, my friends, home! Back to soft, clean sheets and the luxury of home-cooked food. Back to the doggies that climbed all over me and the maid who handed me a bromo-seltzer as I came through the door.

As I write this column I'm beginning to wonder if I haven't struck the answer to all travel. The more you roam, the more you appreciate the things to which you return. Including all the trips I've made since I was a kid, I have now visited practically every spot in the world with the exception of South America. And where is the best place to live? I don't have to supply the answer.

Here's what I mean: Suppose you're a spaghetti hound. When you're in Rome, you hop over to Alfredo's and dive into his noodles and spaghetti with much gusto. But when you have the chance to think it over, the same stuff as Mori prepares it down on Bleecker street is fully as good. And, on occasion, perhaps a little better.

Or suppose you're a nut on scenery. The road from Nice to Monte Carlo is extremely beautiful. Some of the views in Bali are gorgeous, as you have probably noticed. Every land throughout the universe can boast of some great scenic attraction. But I'll still put my dough on the Grand Canyon, or on one of five places that I might mention in Southern California.

The same idea holds good for almost everything you might mention. The Parisian girl is considered pretty, but the American girl makes her look like a sick cow. There is better liquor in America today than there is in plenty of the foreign capitals. In the theatrical and cafe field, Broadway—in spite of all that has happened to it—still leads the world. The Broadways of the foreign ports are all tenth-rate imitations.

Where can you buy better clothes than you can here? England? France? Italy. Don't make me laugh. Where do you strike better autos, finer foods, cleaner living, better hotels or dumber Senators?

All kidding aside, though, it's a tremendous kick to get back into the swing of things once again. There were a number of letters of welcome from the customers this morning, and one or two of them sounded as though they really meant it. And, believe it or not, even my bills had cheery little notes attached to them!

Yes, I've struck the answer to the travel question all right. Every mile you put between you and the home in which you belong makes you just that much more anxious to be back in it. I know now what it means to be happy. And from this day on I'm going to let the other guy do the roaming. Let him learn what it took me so many years to find out.

Yes, sir. I'm through. But I can't help wondering about something. They say South America is a wonderful place. And if I spoke to the boss around vacation time, maybe— . .

Brown Funny On Stanley Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

With Honus Wagner and other Pirates present last night, Joe E. Brown, star of "Elmer the Great," showed the Stanley audience how he home-runned the Cubs to a league pennant, and then won the world's "serious" by driving three runners to the plate ahead of him with another four-station wallop. You might call Joe, or Elmer Kane, to give him his nom de film, the reincarnation of Frank Merriwell except for the fact that Frank never was a dumb, swaggering braggart such as Elmer is. Yet he is funny.

But that's all right with the audience. Even if Joe is chesty, and a little slow with the old brain, he has its sympathy. You can't get mad at a guy who hit 67 home runs in one season. Also you can't be anything but friendly in thought with a fellow who speaks his first word in a radio broadcast, to his mother, even if it is all a hoax, with lamp reflector as a "microphony," to keep swell-headed temperamental Elmer in good humor. And, although you see for yourself that he is uncouth, you hope that he will win the little girl back in the old home town, and trim the city slickers, who manage to keep Elmer out of the world's series until just the proper dramatic moment.

How he does just that provides the audience with many a laugh. Except when he makes love in his awkward way. That is so honest and sincere that one unconscious "pulls" for him.

MEINE TO OPPOSE CARDS IN FINAL

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Tony Shows Right Stuff. Another Southpaw Falls. Cobb Misses on Hubbell. Plight of Negro Boxers. Ladysman's Real Test. Fine Record by Leucht.

PIET PROVES FIBER BY QUICK RALLY

THE FIBER OF a young ball player is best determined by what measure of ability he shows to come back fighting after a costly foozle. If he boots away a game and lets it put him down, there is something wrong with him. If he returns to battle harder than ever for the next game, he is constructed of the right stuff. Such a test of Tony Piet has resulted very strongly in the player's favor. A mental lapse by the Pirate second baseman was partly the cause of Thursday's defeat, but instead of permitting the memory of the slip to lower his morale, Piet shook it off and came out yesterday oozing new aggressiveness, the result being that he played a part in both of Pittsburgh's runs and then saved the game with a sensational stop that turned a base hit into a double play. That's the spirit that makes great ball players.

Tony Piet

An additional gratifying feature of the Buccaneer victory was that it marked another triumph over an enemy southpaw and the continued success of the same kind of pitching on the Pittsburgh side. Last year Larry French lost eight of his first 10 games, and other fork-handers were tying knots in the Pirates. This spring, French has won his first three contests, and in five games in which southpaws started against them the Gibsons have taken the decision four times. Apparently, things have changed—and very much for the better.

KEEPING UP THE promise that he may one day take the place that his father formerly held among the major league pitchers, Jimmy Ring, Jr., narrowly missed the glory of being a no-hit pitcher.

Pitching for Grover Cleveland High School in a Public School League game in Brooklyn, young Ring shut out Richmond Hill High with only one hit. A single with one out in the ninth inning tarnished an otherwise perfect performance when he had a hitless game almost in his pocket.

TY COBB once told a kid named Frank Reiber that he'd never make a ball player because his feet pointed the wrong way and advised him to give it up. Reiber now is a catcher for the Tigers. On top of that story comes another that Cobb, while managing Detroit in 1926 and giving a spring tryout to Carl Hubbell, admonished the latter that he'd have to give up trying to throw a screwball. "Forget it," said Tyrus. "You'll never get anywhere trying to pitch that way, and you'll ruin your arm." Hubbell says he did follow Cobb's suggestion for a season, but found he was more effective with the screwball than without it, so he readopted the deceptive delivery, and says it never has given him any arm trouble. As to its worth, ask the batters. They've made one run off Hubbell in 32 2-3 innings. If it were not for that pitch the Giants' star southpaw might be still in the minors. The more you hear of Cobb's judgment the less you wonder at his failure to be a successful manager.

Sam Leslie

The Giant manager says he likes Leslie's work so much that he has no thought of trying to get anybody else for the place. "I don't know how long I'll be out," Terry remarks, "but the first base job is Leslie's as long as he continues to hit. Not that I want to be a bench manager—it's too nervous a job for me. But if the club keeps going well with Sam on first base I'll not break up a winning combination."

ORVILLE MOHLER, former football star at Southern California, is keeping up his great hitting and fielding for Los Angeles in his first year as a professional baseball player. Though his huge batting average of .480 fell off a bit this week he is still in the thick of the fight for the leadership of the Coast League.

Old Tom Sheehan is in a tie for the top ranking among the pitchers with three victories and no defeats. Of the other former Pirate hurlers working on the Coast, Jimmy Zinn has won three and lost two, and Lou Koupal has won one and lost two.

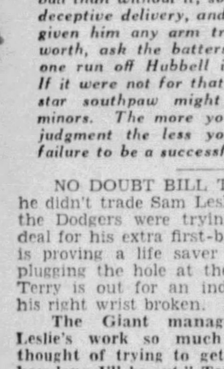
ANOTHER VICTIM OF blindness resulting from blows received in boxing bouts is Jamaica Kid. He is a beggar in a Harlem subway station. The Kid, a Negro, whose proper name is Robert Buckley, was a famous light-heavyweight only a few years ago. He made a fortune in his day, fighting most of the leaders in his division, including Jack Delaney, then champion. It is estimated that his earnings totaled $200,000, but he spent it as fast as he got it, and is now penniless. He still takes a cheerful view of life, however. "I won't go the way of Black Bill," he assures.

BLINDNESS OR SEVERE eye ailments have afflicted a surprising number of once prominent Negro fighters. There have been many cases of such afflictions, often accompanied by destitution, in striking contrast to the life of ease that Harry Wills is able to enjoy in a palatial home in Harlem.

Black Bill was only one on a long list. Tiger Flowers underwent an eye operation shortly before his death. Kid Norfolk lost the sight of one eye at the peak of his career. Sam Langford is almost totally blind. Leo Johnson's eyes have gone back on him. Jackie Rodgers narrowly escaped blindness as the result of a detached retina. And there have been many others.

THE KENTUCKY DERBY will be run one week from today, and much of the existing uncertainty as to the form of the favorite, Ladysman, may be cleared up this afternoon, when W. R. Coe's crack colt is to be a starter in the Chesapeake Handicap at Havre de Grace. The test is in the distance, a mile and a sixteenth.

Ladysman won his first race of the season impressively two weeks ago, but distance was only six furlongs. Today's race will mark the first time he ever has gone a mile and a sixteenth in competition, and it is expected to show not only whether or not he can go a route, but also the condition of the knee that was injured last fall. The same race will bring out some other Derby candidates, among them Repaid, Kerry Patch, Swivel, Caesar's Ghost, The Darb, Utopian and Jungle King, and ought to give the best line yet furnished on the chances of the various runners in the big classic to be staged next Saturday.



Henry Leucht

AMONG THE SCHOLASTIC coaches of the district already looking forward to next fall and winter is Henry Leucht, football and basketball mentor at Mt. Lebanon High. Many of his old players will hold over, and with some good new material coming in, Coach Leucht is confident of having winning teams in both sports. Winning teams are a habit with him, for in his six years at Mt. Lebanon he has had three winners in football and two in basketball. During that period his football teams lost only four games. In his own days as an active athlete, Leucht had a brilliant career in football and basketball at Waynesburg College and also made quite a reputation as a wrestler. The Mt. Lebanon mentor thinks the basketball coaching around here is equal to the best in the country. He is a particular admirer of Chick Davies, of the Dukes, whom he rates one of the best of all time, and also is loud in his praises of the ability and methods of Grover Washabaugh, of South High, and Walter Gross, of Schenley High.

ZAREMBA COPS AS CARNIVAL IS RESUMED

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service.

FRANKLIN FIELD, Philadelphia, April 29.—In weather ideal for record-breaking, the second and final day of the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival got under way early this afternoon with a victory for P. Zaremba, Olympic man, in the hammer throw.

The New York University entry did 161 feet 5 inches to top K. I. Lingle, of Princeton, by more than seven feet. Grant McDougal, of Pennsylvania, the playing-through champion, could do no better than third with 152 feet 11⅝ inches.

The summary:

Hammer throw—Won by Pete Zaremba, New York University, 161 feet 5 inches; second, Kari Lingle, Princeton, 154 feet 4½ inches; third, Grant McDougall, Pennsylvania, 153 feet 11⅝ inches; fourth, Mort Resnick, New York University, 152 feet 11⅝ inches; fifth, Hillman Holcombe, Yale, 151 feet 5⅝ inches.

FOUR RECORDS BROKEN

Jack Keller, Ohio State hurdler, and Joe McCluskey, Fordham distance runner, yesterday broke carnival records as they won their specialties for the third time. Keller raced over the 120-yard hurdles in 14.3 seconds, only a tenth of a second short of the world record, and McCluskey won the 3,000-meter steeplechase in 92:8.5 to lower his own mark.

Manhattan College won the distance medley relay in 10 minutes 14 seconds for a new American record, and Mercersburg Academy broke the carnival record in winning the 440-yard relay in 42.5 seconds.

GRID STAR GAINS IN LIFE FIGHT

The condition of William Hall, University of Pittsburgh football player, a tetanus victim, was reported this morning as fair by authorities at St. Francis Hospital. Hall passed a restful night and his temperature had receded one degree.

The Auburn (W. Va.) sophomore suffered a cut on his cheek in spring practice April 20. He paid little attention to the injury until last Monday, when he became ill and was placed under the care of Dr. H. C. Carlson, director of student health. Tetanus was discovered on Thursday and Hall was rushed to the hospital. His condition was regarded as extremely critical last night.

Hall, 215-pound, 6-foot 2-inch lineman, starred on the Pitt freshman team last fall and was regarded as having a fine chance to win a berth as a first-string tackle on the varsity squad.

Head Play Equals Record in Workout

CHURCHILL DOWNS, LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 29.—(INS.)—Head Play, the west's big hope for the Kentucky Derby next Saturday, showed a dazzling flash of speed in a workout today to equal the track record of :59 for five furlongs.

The Crump colt eased slightly to finish six furlongs in 1:11 4-5, and breezed out a mile in 1:40 1-5. The sensational trial was made on a fast track, with a deep cushion of dust.

HARRIS IS MANAGER

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE BUGABOO OF TECHNOCRACY—The pretzel came into being as the work of Emperor Charlemagne, who forced the subjected heathen Saxons to bake a cross into their dough, in sign of their conversion. According to Charles Betz, pretzel executive of St. Louis, no machine ever has been invented to match the human hand in its ability to properly twist the pretzel dough. Dough has life—according to Betz—and it takes a human being to bend it to his will.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Their April showing entirely satisfactory to the appreciative fans, the Pirates will leave on a pretentious tour of five cities after staging a battle with the Cardinals at the Oakland Orchard this afternoon. The second and last contest with the Redbirds will bring a duel between Heinie Meine and Southpaw Bill Walker, who left the Giants last winter to take up his abode with Sergt. Street.

The end of April finds the Buccos right up there and their collective actions augurs well for the future. The doubtful department of the club—the pitching corps—has measured up to a high standard and while doubt exists as to the future of Remy Kremer and Steve Swetonic, two former aces, Manager Gibson is convinced his sharpshooters are the real McCoy.

IN CINCY TOMORROW

Larry French, Bill Swift, Heine Meine and Waite Hoyt all seem to be ready to do the nine-inning trick in a competent manner. It is significant to note that Larry French is off to the best start the industrious southpaw has enjoyed since he tied his fortunes to the Buccaneer brig. French reeled off a six-hit masterpiece yesterday as he blanked the Redbirds, 2-0, for his third running victory of the season.

Tomorrow will find the Pirates in the locale of The Prince of Pilsen. Gibby will take his team to Zinzinnati for a Sunday encounter with the Reds, but once the contest is ended they will not linger long in the Queen City. Their hurry-up playing chart calls for their appearance in Philly on Monday afternoon, so they will not allow the grass to grow under them in getting from Redland to the City of Brotherly Love.

TO INVADE EAST

The Western clubs are taking the first Eastern swing earlier than usual this year on account of a rather remarkable schedule. In any event the Buccos are slated to take on the seaboard rivals in 13 battles without a break. They will stage three in Philly, three in Brooklyn, three in Boston and four in New York.

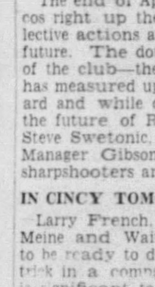
BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

NEW YORK, April 29.—My astute boss, Mr. Clark Griffith, can put two and two together and come out with four. But he had a touch of mental lumbago a couple of weeks back when he figured out these Yankees.



Nick Altrock

To a lad from the Fourth Estate he murmured:

"The Yanks will disintegrate this year. Ruth, Lazzeri and Sewell are too old."

Well, I looked up disintegrate in the dictionary, and it means to crumble up or be shot to pieces like puffed rice. So, if the Yanks are crumbling up in their present form, I hope Joe McCarthy don't reach for a paste pot and glue them together.

I admit Ruth, Lazzeri and Sewell couldn't pass themselves off as Harvard sophomores. But, if we have to wait till they disintegrate this season, I might as well crawl into bed and put a call in for October 15. Disintegrate, my eye! Those guys won't keep me from getting the jitters until they drop dead.

15-ROUND FIGHT BILL MADE LAW

HARRISBURG, April 29.—(AP.)—Fifteen-round boxing bouts in Pennsylvania had been legalized today by Gov. Pinchot.

The Governor signed the bill of Representative Joseph G. Steedle, Allegheny, which extends the limit five rounds beyond the present limit. It becomes effective September 1.

The drive that resulted in enactment of the Steedle act started several months ago when Jack Dempsey visited the Governor.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Just a letter from a fighter, a gamester who lies in the Uniontown Hospital with a broken back, yet looks forward to the day when he will be able to resume his ring activities, at first thought at an end . . . He is Joey Speigal, blonde southpaw, who has appeared here a number of times. He suffered his injury in an automobile accident while driving back from Canton, O., where he defeated Jackie Holt, brother of Billy Holt, six weeks ago.

Speigal writes . . . "Maybe you still remember me—Joey Speigal is the name . . . I'm still in the Uniontown Hospital with my back in a brace, which makes it rather difficult to write, but I hope you'll be able to make this out . . . I've been here six weeks now, still have quite a few more to go . . . However, I am promised a complete recovery, and that's something to look forward to.

Joey Speigal

"Thought I'd drop you a line to let you know how much the inmates of this and other hospitals and other shut-ins enjoy such radio programs as your Trained Seals and the Globe Trotter . . . I still follow the sport pages and am keeping up on the boxing situation so I'll be able to pick up and get back into action as soon as possible . . . Just before I was hurt I was hitting my stride, beating Paul Oger in 10 rounds at Fairmont, W. Va., and Jackie Holt, brother of Billy, at Canton in another 10-rounder, and clicking in both, as you will see from the enclosed clippings . . . I was to box Charley Baxter at Fairmont and Billy Holt in Canton as a result of these bouts.

"I was sorry I couldn't be about to see Jack Dempsey and Max Schmeling when they appeared in Pittsburgh . . . Jack refereed an intercity amateur bout in which I appeared in Cleveland and always has been my idol . . . I'd appreciate your thanking the boxers, managers and fans who have sent me letters and cards at the hospital to cheer me up . . . Tell them I'll be back better than ever when I get out of here . . . It has taken me hours to write this letter because of my awkward position lying on my back, but I just wanted to let you know that I'm beating this bad break and am far from through."

Our thoughts go back to some fights in which Speigal, who could both box and fight on occasion, heard the jeers and jibes of the fans, as well as their acclaim . . . "Stand up and fight!" . . . "Quit running and mix!" . . . "What's the matter, Joey—afraid?" . . . Every boxer must bear these thrusts from the "brave" ringsiders at some time in his career . . . But there's Joey, taking a long count in the hospital, his broken back slowly mending, and taking hours to write and tell the world he's far from licked and still dreaming of going on to the heights . . . A gamester, nothing less.—HARRY KECK.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 29.—(INS.)—A new record for the hammer throw was written into Drake relay records today when Biddinger, of Indiana University, hurled the weight 161 feet 4.9 inches.

His toss shattered the previous 157-foot 7-inch mark, made by Ketz, of Michigan, in 1929, by nearly four feet.

SENATORS, TIGERS HIT STRIDES IN AMERICAN

NATS WIN OVER YANKS, 4-3, IN 'TAME' GAME

Associated Press.

Two American League ball clubs appear to have "found" themselves after a shaky start. They are the Washington Senators and Bucky Harris' promising Detroit Tigers.

Both fared badly in the first 10 days of the campaign, then turned about in the past week and climbed rapidly, each winning five out of six games. The only other club to do as well, the New York Giants, progressed to the National League lead, winning five consecutive games.

NATS BEAT YANKEES

By turning back the New York Yankees, 4-3 yesterday in a mild 10-inning game that furnished a sharp contrast to the furious fistic encounter of the closing game of their series at Washington Tuesday, the Senators made it three victories over the champions in four games and maintained their tie with Cleveland for third place.

The fines, suspensions and reprimands that were handed out just before had, perhaps, a chastening effect on the teams. Completing his investigation of the fracas, William Harridge, American League president, imposed $100 fines and five-day suspensions to the three principals, Ben Chapman, of the Yankees, and Buddy Myer and Earl Whitehill, of Washington.

Detroit was lucky to get its fouth victory of the week over the St. Louis Browns by a 5-3 count. Two wild throws in the ninth inning allowed the Tigers to score the winning runs and cost Ed Wells a well pitched game.

Cleveland walloped the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 1, behind the steady pitching of Sarge Connally. Philadelphia's Athletics, scoring six runs in the third inning, beat out the Boston Red Sox, 9 to 8.

REDS UPSET CUBS

The Cincinnati Reds blasted Lon Warneke from the slab with six runs in the eighth inning and defeated the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 1.

The Boston Braves pounded John Berly hard in the early innings and defeated the Phillies, 5 to 2. The Giants and Brooklyn had an open date.

Here's a Technical Putout in Baseball—It Happened at Forbes Field

Many baseball fans wondered why Paul Waner was declared out on a grounder down the first base line during yesterday's 2-0 victory for the Pirates over the Cardinals at Forbes Field, although he was not touched with the ball, which is seen loose above. The ruling was a technical one. On a batted ball the runner is not permitted to interfere with a player trying to field it, and must run out of the base line if necessary. Paul didn't do this. Instead he ran into Pitcher Mooney, who was trying to field the ball, and was declared out. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

SKIBO GRIDDERS BOW TO GRADS

By JESS CARVER

A 45-yard field goal from placement, booted by Hooks Sample in the final period, enabled the Carnegie Tech alumni gridders to defeat the 1933 Tartan varsity, 3 to 0, in a red-hot football game in Tartan Bowl this morning. The contest was the high spot of Tech's spring grid drills.

Captained by Joe Morbito, the Alumni battled the varsity on better than even terms all the way, piled up a total of six first downs to one for the regulars and twice pushed inside the varsity 10-yard stripe.

The way was paved for Sample's winning goal in the fourth period with George Kavel, star halfback of last year's Tech team, caught a pass on the tips of his fingers that netted 32 yards and a first down on the varsity 9-yard line. In three tries, the alumni was unable to advance the ball. Dropping back to the 35, Sample sent the ball between the goal posts from a difficult angle. There was enough carry on the ball to have traveled 10 additional yards had it been necessary. The lineup:

DUKES HOLD CLINIC

Coach Chick Davies, of the Duquesne basketball team, and Cal Bolster, well known local official, conducted a basketball clinic in the Duquesne University gymnasium this morning before a good sized turnout.

Coach Davies opened the session with a blackboard talk and then demonstrated various plays and types of defense, using the Dukes' varsity players in the demonstrations.

Bolster followed Davies with a talk on the rules and also demonstrated various situations. Director of Athletics Elmer Layden introduced the speakers.

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Former National Amateur and Open Golf Champion.

An ardent golfer solicits advice on the proper grip of the club, and to what extent the grip affects distance. In my opinion, the manner in which one grips a golf club has to do with the individual himself, and I do not think it has any bearing whatsoever upon distance.

My friend had been advised by some to use an overlapping grip and others suggested the old-fashioned V-grip which is neither interlocking nor overlapping. As every golfer knows, there are three grips that can be used—the aforementioned V-grip, the Vardon grip which is overlapping, and the interlocking grip. To recommend any one of them would be something that I would not care to do for the very good reason that I have seen excellent golfers who employed each of the three grips with success. It is suffice to say that the proper grip for a golfer is the one that feels the most comfortable. The Vardon grip is by far the most common grip used, and such leaders of the sport as Bobby Jones, Olin Dutra, Walter Hagen, Paul Runyan, Horton Smith, Tommy Armour and Craig Wood all use this grip.

Francis Ouimet

OVERLAPPING GRIP

There is one thing about the Vardon grip that I have noticed and that is it is almost impossible to overswing, which, of course, is a good thing because it keeps the club under control at all times. To say that the Vardon grip is a better one than perhaps the interlocking one would be the same as saying that Gene Sarazen, in spite of his success in winning the British and U. S. Open championships last year, uses the wrong grip when he uses the interlocking method; and, of course, such a statement would be ridiculous.

In their 72-hole exhibition match at Miami this past winter, there was very little difference in the distances obtained by Dutra and Sarazen, and both used different grips. Dutra, in size and appearance, looked as if he could hit the ball yards further than the short, but stocky, Sarazen, although Sarazen, with his interlocking grip, can hit the ball as long consistently as anybody I have seen; and to make the comparison complete for the sake of my friend, I might include Abe Mitchell, who, in his prime, was the longest and most accurate hitter of a golf ball I have seen. Mitchell could not grip a club with anything but the V-grip; that is, when the fingers of the right and left hand hold the club independently of one another.

GRIP HELD IN FINGERS

The important thing in gripping a club, I think, is to be certain that the club is held by the fingers rather than the palms of the hand.

My friend who would like to develop a grip that will give him an excellent distance has learned nothing so far, I am sure, from what I have said, but I would suggest very strongly to him that, instead of fiddling around with V-grips, interlocking grips and Vardon grips, he cultivate the grip that feels the most natural and comfortable to him, and then make certain that the grip of his club is held in the fingers rather than the palm of the hand. Every golfer of any consequence at all grips a club with the fingers, and I am convinced in my own mind that such a grip is the one that produces the greatest distance.

My reason for believing this to be so is that a grip held in the fingers of both hands makes it necessary for the wrists to take an active part in the play, and, at the moment of impact, the wrist action is the thing that furnishes the distance. If the player persists in letting the grip of the club slide in the palms of his hands, he loses the benefit of his wrists and any distance he obtains comes more as a result of brute strength and action from the forearms than anything else.

MEINE READY FOR CARDS

The jaunt will come to a close two weeks from tomorrow in the metropolis and on the following day they will show against the Phillies at Forbes Field. In other words there will be no action at the Oakland Orchard after today until Monday, May 15.

Schoolmaster Jimy Mooney, who also flips the rocket with his left hand, swapped punches beautifully with French yesterday. Jim worked seven rounds before retiring for a pinch hitter; in that long space of time he limited the Pittsburgh attack to four hits and one of these, a double that influenced the triumph, was a fluke hit that should have been caught by George Watkins, Redbird rightfielder.

TONY IN CIRCUS PLAY

Tony Piet saved the victory for Pittsburgh in the eighth by starting one of the greatest double plays this writer has seen in many years service in the Oakland Orchard. Tony made a marvelous one-hand stop of a furious Frisch grounder that would have put the winning run on the sacks with only one out had Anthony Francis failed. The speedy Pole caused a sensation in the stands by holding the ball while in a difficult posture, and when he threw to Vaughan for a force out, the spectators gasped. The same people were spellbound when Arky got the sphere to first in time to double Frisch as Ethan ambled plateward.

Allen opened the eighth with a scorching double to left in batting for Mooney. Orsatti flied out, but Watkins, who had been a strikeout pushover for French in three previous jousts, whipped a single into left, Allen taking third. Frisch then rammed his ugly "dirter" on Tony's right and Piet came up with the smash.

Vaughan scored for the Pirates in the second. He walked and went to third on Piet's double to Watkins. Finney's fly to Orsati scored Arky. Piet scored the other tally in the seventh on a pass, Finney's sacrifice and L. Waner's single to left.

FLOORED TWICE, HERRERA WINS OVER COX

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

Any time a lightweight boxer gets hot around here all the promoters have to do to take care of him is to send for Tony Herrera, of Chicago. He cools 'em off—and how!

Last night they turned Tony loose on Tracey Cox, the well-known puncher, from Indianapolis, before the banner crowd of the season at the Arena, on the North Side, and, aside from two knockdowns scored by the dangerous Cox, one for a count of four in the second round and the other for two in the tenth, it was a rout.

Giving Cox credit for the two rounds in which he scored knockdowns, Tony won all of the others with the possible exception of the first, which might be called even, with Herrera warming up slowly to his work as he sounded out his bulky opponent. After that opening session was out of the way, Tony loped into his stride and played a tattoo on Cox's face with his left jab, hooked to the body and occasionally crossed a hard right to the head, while he fairly "murdered" the Hoosier in the clinches. Cox didn't do a bit of fighting at close quarters, looking bad as he grabbed and clinched to stop Tony's pounding attack.

HERRERA FAR IN FRONT

The first knockdown came from a straight left, little more than a jab, and Tony seemed more surprised than hurt as he landed in a sitting position and deliberately took a count of four. The second one, in the final round, came with Tony so far in front he could have conceded putts and still breezed in. He was having things all his own way and was getting careless and walked into a left swing and went down. This time he jumped up at two, and the end of the round again found him with everything under control.

Cox proved once more, as in his bouts with Billy Holt and Tony Falco here, that he's just a puncher and nothing else. He doesn't rate with the good boxers, and, for all of his wallop, he isn't a finisher. He had Holt and Falco down some three times each and couldn't keep them there, and last night he dropped Herrera twice and wound up running for Sweeney. Not that he doesn't give the fans thrills, for he does. Tony would sock him in a dozen places last night and nothing would be said about it, but all Tracey had to do was to load one up and miss by a foot, and you could hear them "Oohing!" all over the jammed Arena. Once, in the ninth round, he missed an uppercut so hard that he went down from the follow-through.

Following the bout Herrera said he had injured the base of his spine in hitting the floor in the second round, and he received chiropractic treatment before leaving on an early-morning train for Chicago.

ZIVIC, SCOTTAN WIN

Fritizie Zivic won the judges' decision over Patsy Hennigan in the six-round semi-final, a sloppy bout, after getting off to a bad start. He lost the first two rounds, hurt Patsy with a right to the jaw in the third and outfinished his man, but was far below his standard at all times.

Scotty Scottan, Indianapolis featherweight stablemate of Cox, and a pocket edition of the latter, knocked out Harry Lennox, of Cumberland, in the third round in a bout in which he led all of the way. Lennox tried to claim a foul as he went down in his own corner, but he couldn't fool eagle-eyed Jack Henderson, the referee, who counted him out.

Harry Weekly, of Alliance, O., bested Heebee Thomas, East End Negro featherweight protege of Johnny Ray, making his professional debut, and Sammy Paris and Johnny Warner fought a rousing draw in the opener. Thomas floored Weekley for no count in the opening round, but the latter's experience told thereafter.

Al Grayber alternated with Henderson as referee and handled the main bout. It was announced that Pete De Grasse, of New York, and Jimmy Thomas, local Negro bantamweight, will meet a third time in the main bout next Friday night.

LINKS OPENED AT SCHENLEY

By TOM BIRKS

The 1933 golf season on the municipal links in Schenley Park officially got under way this morning when Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, Mayor John Herron, Professional Bob Graham, Director of Public Safety Harmar D. Denny, Jr., and Councilman George S. Oliver sent drives down the first fairway.

Bad weather held up the official opening for a long time, but an inspection of the greens and fairways indicates that Greenskeeper John Kauffmann has the course in excellent condition.

A number of notables attended the opening ceremony. John J. Burke, who has accomplished much for public links golf in this district, was among the [illegible] that surrounded the initial tee.

Two intercollegiate matches are being played today. At South Hills Country Club the Nittany Lions, of Penn State, are fighting it out with the Panthers, of Pitt. Lloyd Beyer, Pennsylvania state amateur champion in 1931, meets Art Sekay in the feature match of the day.

At the Pittsburgh Field Club the Carnegie Tech niblick wielders clash with the Dukes. It is the Tartans' initial clash in intercollegiate golf warfare.

STOCKS CLOSE BUOYANT, UP 1 TO 5

NEW YORK, April 29.—(AP.)—The Senate's acceptance of the inflation-agricultural bill set the signal for a fresh frenzy of buying in the Stock Exchange today, sending many issues up 1 to more than 5 points in the biggest Saturday's trading in many months. The market closed buoyantly, with a turnover for the two-hour session of some 2,850,000 shares.

Traders who had put out short lines in expectation of a sharp technical reaction were severely squeezed in the new uprush, and a wide assorting of issues reached the best levels for the year or longer. Price averages were boosted to the highest level since last September.

Further indications of business expansion, in the week-end trade reviews, was also undoubtedly a factor in the upsurge. Reports from the steel and automobile industries were particularly encouraging. Further stiffening in steel prices was indicated, and estimates indicated that ingot production had stepped up to new high levels for more than a year.

Trading facilities were again overwhelmed by the rush of business in the Stock Exchange, and the ticker ran for several minutes after the close.

Commodities were buoyant as well, and second grade bonds soared. The weekly freight car loadings showed a check to the recent advance, but railroad quarters looked for further expansion. For the week ended April 22, Class I roads handled 492,970 cars, or 1,245 less than in the previous week.

Sears-Roebuck's sales report for the four weeks ended April 22 showed a reduction of only 12.4 per cent from 1932, against a drop of 18.8 per cent for the first 12 weeks of the year.

Cotton jumped about $2 a bale, and wheat advanced 2 to 3 cents in the earlier trading. Foreign exchanges again strengthened against the dollar, with sterling up several cents, and French francs up several points, although failing to reach their recent highs.

WHEAT CLOSES UP 6 CENTS

CHICAGO, April 29.—Tumultuous purchasing on a tremendous scale hoisted wheat more than 6 cents a bushel late today.

Season high price records for wheat were outdone, and corn, oats, rye and barley were also sharply higher. Broad public speculative demand for all grains, following passage of inflation measures by the Senate, was the outstanding feature.

Wheat closed buoyant 5⅛ to 6 cents above yesterday's finish; corn, 2⅜ to 3⅜ up; oats, 1⅜ to 1⅞ advance, and provisions showing 7 cents to 42 cents gain.

STEEL HOLDING FAVORABLE TREND

By B. E. V. LUTY

The rate of increase in steel buying has slowed down from a week ago but there is still a favorable trend.

Production of steel ingots this week has been at about 25 per cent of capacity, the increase of three points over last week reflecting recent increase in buying and the operation, on short runs, of three rail mills, the two in the Chicago district and the one in the Pittsburgh district. Thus production is at about three points above the highest rate reached early in the year, before banking troubles slowed things down, while it is three-fourths higher than the low rate in this whole period, reached last August.

Buying continues to be for very prompt shipment, whereby mills accumulate no backlogs and are unable to make definite predictions as to further increases. A complication is that some of the recent buying may have been simply buying deferred during the period of bank troubles.

JOBBERS STOCKING UP

Outside of the automobile industry there is no large consuming class active, demand for steel coming from a wide variety of sources, impossible to study closely in detail. Jobbers have increased their buying sharply in the last 30 days, from a very low rate, and appear to be stocking up in a mild way besides having a better distribution.

Apart from rails, in which there has been a little buying and some releasing against old contracts, there is virtually no railroad buying and none of consequence is expected until after Washington has acted on the case of the railroads. There is very little general building, and fabricated structural steel is running light.

There is much talk of higher steel prices coming, in connection with inflation, and buyers are showing as much interest in the matter as sellers, but thus far without actually placing orders to replenish stocks in anticipation.

STRIPS, SHEETS RAISED

On Wednesday announcement was made of an advance of $2 a ton in hot rolled strips, making the base price 1.55 cents, Pittsburgh, effective at once on new business, while regular customers are covered by contract for the quarter. Inland Steel Company, Chicago, has announced advances of $2 to $3 a ton in its sheet prices. An advance in nails within a few weeks is regarded as probable.

Pig iron markets are firmer all around. There have been only occasional advances thus far.

The Pittsburgh district scrap market has found a level, as to trading in small lots, at $10 to $10.50 for heavy melting steel, an advance of 50 cents over the range before inflation became a definite possibility, and $2 advance over the market ruling until early in March. Both Eastern Pennsylvania and Chicago have advanced in the last fortnight. Lots of ordinary mill size could not be bought at present quotations.

Number one heavy smelting steel scrap has been advanced 25c further to $10.50-11.00, it was announced this afternoon.

THRILLING NOVEL OF THE CHILDREN OF DANCING MOTHERS

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The words he had just spoken seemed to hang in the air of the little office . . . "I think about you sometimes . . ."

"What did . . . you say?" she asked slowly, and her lips felt stiff, like two little pieces of wood.

"You heard what I said, Sharlie. I told you I thought about you entirely too often for my own good," Mr. Collins answered cheerfully. "Shut up your desk and put your wrap on. We're going for that drive of ours."

It was quarter to five and the last rays of the sun were still rosy on the brick wall of the Lattimer Building across the street. In another fifteen minutes it would be dusk and ten minutes later it would really be dark.

"We won't see much of the country tonight," thought Sharlie, beginning to thrill with a feeling of adventure. But it would be fun to drive through the darkness, probably find some inn on the State highway for dinner, and then coming back to town late at night. Lights and music and dancing had always meant much more to her than any sights or any sounds of the country.

The washroom downstairs was empty at that time of day, and she sang to herself as she washed her hands and put a fresh layer of lipstick on her mouth. In the bottom drawer of Edna's desk was a pair of clean white chamios gloves that Edna always kept there in case she wanted to stay downtown for a concert or a lecture or a talkie.

Sharlie pulled them on over her pretty hands. For a second she knew that she was doing an unfair thing in going out like this with the man whom Edna was in love with.

"But I'm in love with him, too," she thought then, and so is this Mrs. Wilmot. I have just as much right to try to make him like me as she or Edna has." All was fair in love and war. The whole world knew that, and always had.

She snapped the clasps of the gloves and turned to Mr. Collins with a starry look of happiness in her unclouded eyes. "Oh, I think this is going to be more fun!" she said excitedly.

TO MEET OUTSIDE

"I can't remember ever looking forward to circus-day the way I've looked forward to this drive of ours, Mr. Collins." Her thick eyelashes swept down and then up as she gave him a quick demure look. "Perhaps it's because I get so tired of working downtown day after day . . . Sometimes I think I wasn't cut out for office work."

Mr. Collins had crossed the room and stood by the door that led to the outer office. He was frowning at her thoughtfully.

"I'll tell you what," he said suddenly. "I'll go down and get my car and pick you up at the corner of Thirteenth and Spring street . . . in five minutes, say. We don't want the office people to see us going out together, do we?"

Sharlie would have been delighted to have them all see her leaving the building with Mr. Collins, and she was a little hurt and resentful because he did not want them to see him with her.

"Still, I suppose it would start a lot of silly office gossip," she said to herself as she rang for the elevator five minutes later.

She stopped twice on her way to Thirteenth Street and powdered her nose before the mirrors of weighing machines. The clear chilly air made her look unusually fresh and deepened the color in her cheeks. She was better-looking than this Mrs. Wilmot, she told herself.

SEES MRS. WILMOT

And just then, as she was turning away from the little round mirror above a weighing machine, she saw Mrs. Wilmot! She was walking slowly along the street toward Thirteenth, as if she were enjoying the sunshine and the crowds. On her breast was a pair of white gardenias tied with silver ribbon that had not been there when she visited Mr. Collins, and she had a small white package in one of her hands. Evidently she had been doing a little shopping.

Sharlie, strolling along just behind her, wished that she would drop in at one of the stores that bordered the sidewalk and do a little more shopping. But she did not. She walked straight on . . . and reached the corner of Spring and Thirteenth just a second before Sharlie.

On the opposite corner sat Mr. Collins in his open roadster, smoking a cigarette and watching the crowds intently. Sharlie saw him frown as he caught sight of Mrs. Wilmot. Then he leaned forward and started his car. It turned the corner and disappeared in the traffic of Spring Street.

Three minutes went by. Sharlie stood in the doorway of the Owl drugstore and watched Mrs. Wilmot hail a taxicab and ride away in it.

It was a full half hour before the roadster rounded the corner once more. By that time the street was filled with blue-gray dusk and Sharlie's feet ached from standing so long. She sank down on the leather seat of the roadster with a great sigh of relief.

"I thought you were never coming back, Mr. Collins!" she said. "I was just giving you up."

"You knew I'd come back for you just as well as you knew why I drove away, Sharlie."

Sharlie shrugged her shoulders. "I knew why you left—You didn't want your Mrs. Wilmot to see you meeting your stenographer outside the office!"

"I didn't want her to stop and talk to me! If she had I'd have had to drive her home—"

"While I waited on the corner?" Sharlie interrupted him to ask.

GETS MORE PERSONAL

He did not answer.

"She's too old for you," Sharlie said after a minute or two while the roadster zig-zagged through the traffic. "That's why you don't want to be bothered with her—isn't it?"

She was sitting in the corner of the seat with her eyes on Mr. Collins' face as she spoke. She saw him smile to himself for an instant.

"You know I can't answer a question like that, young woman," he said, and then he gave a short bark of laughter.

"Why don't you like Mrs. Wilmot, Sharlie?"

Sharlie drew a long breath. "Because she likes you!"

There, that was the way to talk to him! Not as if he were her employer but as if he were simply a man who liked her enough to ask her to take a drive with him. A man she was crazy about.

All the people in the office had always spoken to him with great respect, Edna included. It was "Yes, Mr. Collins," "No, Mr. Collins" and "I'll see, Mr. Collins" all day long at the office. Everybody there stood in awe of him.

But this wasn't the office—and it wasn't office hours now.

SHARLIE CONFIDENT

Sharlie laughed. "I shouldn't have said that—but it just slipped out, Mr. Collins," she murmured. "It's the truth, however. I am jealous of Mrs. Wilmot. You know, all of us—all of the girls at the office are in love with you, Mr. Collins."

He shook his head. "That's nonsense. Those girls have worked for me for years—most of them. They all have young fellows of their own."

It was on the tip of Sharlie's tongue to say, "Edna hasn't." But she decided not to, the next second. Why give Mr. Collins the impression that Edna was in love with him, and lived a man-less existence outside the office?

"I haven't any 'young fellow'," was what she finally did say. "You're the only man I ever see—except my father."

Mr. Collins was looking at her intently. The car had stopped at a crossing and she could feel his eyes on her face. Then he reached out and laid his hand slightly on her shoulder for an instant.

"Well, if that's the case," he said, "I'll have to be mighty nice to you from now on, won't I, Sharlie?"

Sharlie put her head to one side and gave him a small smile that barely moved her lips. Behind that smile she was thinking that a man—even a big business man like Mr. Collins—was very easy to manage.

"I'll bet I'll have him asking me to marry him in no time at all," she said to herself with the cocksureness of a very young and lovely woman. But by midnight she had changed her mind about him. He wasn't so easy, after all.

A WAR CHARIOT OF THE TYPE UTILIZED BY GENGHIS KHAN'S CHINESE OPPONENTS

One important happening in Genghis Khan's career was the conquest of Northern China. He scaled the Great Wall in 1211 and took, after bloody battles, Peking (1215). (World's History).

GENGHIS KHAN, THE MONGOL CONQUEROR (1155-1227)

He and his exploits shook the Eurasian world in the thirteenth century like the Huns, Bulgarians, Magyars, in former years. Genghis Khan in his luster for victory and power became absolute ruler of an empire that utterly dwarfs that of Alexander, Caesar or Napoleon, extending from the Yellow Sea to the Dnieper, from Burma to the Arctic. Through his conquests the location and nature of civilization was actually influenced. (World's History.)

PARKS OF GIANT TREES

The Sequoia National Park, Cal., covers 604 square miles, with the Giant Forest, Mount Whitney, and Kern River Canyon as main features. The General Sherman tree, the largest and oldest living thing, is estimated to be more than 3,500 years old (right). The General Grant National Park, 63 miles drive from the Sequoia, has two magnificent growths of big trees, including the General Grant. Top: The fallen Michigan tree.

COMPOSITION OF MILK AND CREAM (Science)

Milk is necessary for the young and the grown up as well. When milk reaches the stomach, the protein separates in form of curd. As curd is not easy to digest in large quantities, milk should be taken in sips and not gulped down. (Kinne & Cooley: Foods.)

COMPOSITION OF FAT FOODS (Science)

Fats are composed of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen and have much more carbon than other foods. (Kinne & Cooley: Foods.)

STEAM POWER PLANT (Science)

Steam is generated in the water-tube boiler by burning coal from the bunker, deposited there by conveyors from coal cars (left). The steam drives a reciprocating engine which rotates an electric generator. The electricity is used in outside motors and also for light. The used steam is condensed and the water-air mixture removed by the "wet-air" pump. A feed-water pump fills the boiler with hot water. Both pumps are driven by steam from the boiler. The chemical energy in the coal is transformed into mechanical energy by the steam engine and into electrical energy by the generator. The thermal efficiency is 10—12% (MacNaughton: Steam Power Engineering.)

Government Speeds Up Production

It slaps Wall street bad men right between the polka dots. And the strange thing about it is the silence with which it was accepted. The honest brokers have nothing to yell about and the crooked ones can't squawk without feathering their own nests with tar.

That was a well-vulcanized patch for years. Keep the government out of business. Well, the government is in business now and the businessmen are glad of it.

When a lighthouse blinks its federal warning to merchant vessels the government is in business. We never heard any complaints about that. When a letter carrier hands you your morning mail the government is in the messenger service. Any objection to that? None.

The U. S. parcel post will grab any bundle you are strong enough to wrap and tote. This never started any indignation meetings so far.

The government has financed the banks, the farms, and a thousand other projects. It builds harbors, public buildings and deepens rivers. It assisted in constructing our first overland railroad. It will either purchase or protect your inventions. The government has been in business ever since pups had curly tails.

The shriek about boycotting government in trade was raised by the we-boys who wanted to grab it all for themselves.

That was back in 1929 when all you heard was the self-preserving cry, "Children and vice presidents of corporations first."

Things were going from bad to second-hand worse when the government stepped in and helped everybody ashore who was going ashore. A lot of the stocks and bonds went south to a watered grave. And the ones who survived are thankful that the government went into business.

Yessir, Uncle Sam is in overalls and is making the mouse traps that result in beaten paths. And each one will be more economical than buying milk for a cat.

Good Police Work

Our compliments to Patrolmen Bartholomew Flaherty and George Puff for the alertness, intelligence and courage they showed in the capture of two of the penitentiary fugitives. Puff, it develops, went to the penitentiary when off duty to study descriptions and photographs of the escaped convicts. Under the merit system such zeal as this would be sure eventually to bring promotion.

The question arises if there is any hope that Mayor John S. Herron will substitute the merit system for the spoils system in making changes in the personnel of the Bureau of Police. Not much, we fear. As president of Council he never raised his voice against Mayor Charles H. Kline's political manipulation of the police. The fact that Herron is in alliance with Senator James J. Coyne also is discouraging.

*On the other hand, Herron has shown a commend-*able inclination to seek good advice from outside the administration and outside the Coyne machine to help him in coping with municipal problems. At the Mayor's request, for example, 16 of the city's foremost physicians have consented to serve as an advisory committee to the Department of Health.

There have been rumors that advisory committees will be asked to help with suggestions in the administration of other departments, too. This may be productive of considerable benefit if professional politicians and other persons with selfish axes to grind are barred. Council has paved the way for extension of this consultative service by asking citizens' committees for advice on taxation and water front improvements.

An advisory committee of honest and patriotic citizens might be particularly beneficial in the management of the Bureau of Police. Racketeering has flourished in Pittsburgh in recent years because greedy politicians, in alliance with racketeers, and not unselfish citizens with Pittsburgh's welfare at heart, have been allowed to say how the Police Bureau should be run.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park announces that county detectives hereafter will operate exclusively outside of Pittsburgh. They will make no raids in the city, but leave the enforcement of the law within the municipal boundaries to the city police. Park's announcement is intended to show confidence in the Herron administration. Whether or not confidence is warranted remains to be seen.

Both the city and county police forces have been subject to the same pernicious influence—the influence of the Coyne machine. The Monaca Club, operating across the street from the Oakland Police Station, was publicly denounced, again and again, as a gambling house and speakeasy. The city police did nothing about it, and neither did the county detectives. State police had to be called from Reading to close the resort.

The city police did nothing to bring to justice the "night riders" who stole ballot boxes and altered ballots in the election last November. Neither did the county detectives. Agents of the United States Department of Justice had to be called from Washington to do the work. The evidence they gathered is to be laid next week before the federal grand jury.

That it has been necessary for Washington to intervene, and for the United States District Court, which has only limited powers in election cases, to assume the task of protecting the voters of Allegheny County from election crooks, is a disgraceful commentary on the vigor, efficiency and enthusiasm for civic decency, of our county courts. They, too, are subject to the pernicious influence of the Republican organization.

We have President Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Democratic administration to thank for this New Deal in our struggle for honest elections. It is inconceivable that a Republican administration would order the United States District Attorney here to investigate election frauds and appoint an energetic and capable lawyer like Earl F. Reed as special counsel to assist him.

*It looks, too, as if Pittsburghers would have addi-*tional cause for gratitude to President Roosevelt and the New Deal in a prospective appointment to the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is reported in well-informed circles that a Pittsburgher is being favorably considered for the job. It should mean a great deal to Pittsburgh to have on the Interstate Commerce Commission someone who understands our traffic and transportation problems.

Pittsburgh is one of the world's greatest centers of traffic, and Pennsylvania is a Republican stronghold, and the second most populous state as well; yet Pennsylvania, under Republican administrations, has not had representation on the Interstate Commerce Commission. To this may be due the discrimination from which we have suffered in the Lake Cargo coal rate case and other important rate matters.

Tomorrow is President's Day. It is to be a day specially set aside for prayers for President Roosevelt—prayers of thanks and of supplication for a Divine blessing on our Chief Executive. Pittsburgh should and will enter earnestly into the spirit of the occasion. The churches and the civic bodies will do their part. Let every citizen co-operate.

Another justice of the peace has pleaded guilty to cheating the county by collecting fees for imaginary services in fictitious cases. The fee system encourages dishonesty. If squires and constables were paid salaries, instead of fees depending on the number of cases tried, there would be less incentive to be crooked and unjust.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot should approve the bill forbidding a candidate for public office to seek the nomination of more than one party in the primary. Good government demands that the citizens shall know for what the candidates stand. This cannot be known if candidates run on the tickets of several parties having conflicting platforms.

A timely and intensely interesting article, entitled "Persecuted Races and Religious Sects of Other Days," will be published tomorrow in the American Weekly, distributed as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The outbreak of the Nazis against the Jews of Germany has been made the occasion for a review of other such campaigns throughout the ages.

President's Day

(Copyright, 1933.)

The greatest office bestowed by any people in the world is the office of the Presidency of the United States.

To the high office, Washington gave a dignity greater than that of kings.

In times of political uncertainty, Jefferson and Jackson kept the office responsive to the ideals of a Democratic nation.

In years of Civil War, Lincoln administered the office with touches of humanity that endeared him forever to all mankind.

Tomorrow, throughout the land, President's Day will be celebrated for the first time.

The celebration will be, in part, America's homage to the office itself. But also, on this occasion, the people will pay warm tribute to him who now holds the exalted place—and their prayers will be, may the God of Washington and Lincoln guide and sustain him in the tasks of patriotism and service that are his to fulfill.

See Him Go

THIS BRITISH "LONG DOG" NAMED DAINTY DICK POSSESSES SPEED.

This English racing greyhound, raised in Birmingham, practicing in a "hurdle race," illustrates natural power in its highest development. The dog is said to have made some marvelous speed records during an "all-hurdle trial."

In races to come, thousands will bet their money on him and on other "long dogs," just as other thousands and tens of thousands waste their time and bet their money on dogs and horses that race here in the United States.

Geese that fritter away their money gambling on horses or dogs or whatever it may be, might learn something from this powerful animal. He doesn't stand around and watch. He attends to the job put before him with all his power.

If those that watch and bet at dog races and horse races would go home and do the same they would be better off.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 29.—Purely personal piffle: I like to jump at people out of dark places, drink left-over cream at breakfast and pronounce Chappaqua. No writer can be duller or wittier than P. G. Wodehouse. Anyone's name I cannot remember I call "Eppis." No hotel offers the charm of the old Planters in St. Louis.

Two friends in as many years have vanished without trace. Valentino interested me more as a personality than any other movie star. A scar on my forehead is from trying to light a pipe from a jet of flame in a linotype machine. I like to prowl around gas house districts.

All I have to say is "Where's that switch?" and the Sealyham streaks under the bed. And "Are there are good dogs around here?" brings him out wagging his tail. My wife and I started out driving one evening and wound up in Boston. It all started discussing baked beans.

Nothing confuses me more than trying to pass a boy on a bicycle. The most dignified city I ever visited was The Hague. I haven't a single clipping of anything written for a newspaper. The first editor of prominence to praise my column was E. W. Howe, of Kansas. My wife has not missed a Sunday at church in 25 years.

* * *

Mike Mitchell, the ball player, and I occupied the same table at a Cincinnati boarding house for three years. Hypnotists strike me as fakers, but I don't care to look them in the eye. Incidentally, two of the most serenely honest people I know have shifty eyes. The country home I'd like most to own is in Sleepy Hollow. An hour after reaching Paris one time there came a letter from Homer Croy with a clipping from a home town weekly that my father had attended a baseball game in St. Joseph, Mo. He bewilders his friends this way in all parts of the world. When theatrical discussion grows too arty I mention Dion Boucicault's name casually just to show I can pronounce it.

* * *

The best black bean soup in town is at The Players. Say "best black bean" as fast as you can. I'd like to spend an evening goading Theodore Dreiser. Just to hear him roar. I've tried all the Russian cafes for bortch soup, but the best is at Reuben's. At 25 I had a pure white streak an inch wide through the middle of my hair. E. Jesse Conway used to say it came from dodging the ornithorhynchi—beasts with a bill, if it's too technical.

* * *

The worldliest I ever felt was when a banker from home saw me sitting with a concert hall blonde with gold teeth at the old Atlantic Gardens. Was I inhaling cigarets and shooting my cuffs? Because I write so much about dogs at least 10,000 people have sent me Senator Vest's eulogy of them.

* * *

I'd rather see workmenlike troupers such as Sophie Tucker, Dave Appolon, Belle Baker and Bill Robinson perform than watch the affectations of the Alfred Lunts or Noel Coward. Harlem night clubs depress me and I cannot understand more than half Boake Carter says over the radio. There's no excuse for New York State's excessive taxes. I motored around Potsdam an hour thinking it was Berlin.

* * *

After a few years of it, the most boring entertainment in New York is a first night. A bright spot is the fellow who pans me in private and always rushes up with a lot of fuss and feathers. More than 3,000 autographed first editions are willed to my home library. The press agent stuff every spring about Babe Ruth's salary holdout gives me a stiff pain. The neatest evening clothes are worn by Messmore Kendall.

* * *

I'm always vowing to get my hair cut oftener. Frank H. Simonds is the only correspondent who made the war debt issue clear. During vaudeville days I could repeat all the routine in Lyon and Rosko's act, even to the cheed-a-beedie-bee song. In a Pullman smoker on the way home from school one time I passed myself off as a detective and found I was talking to W. J. Burns. And you should have heard me try to bail myself out.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Perhaps the following incident won't mean much to you. You may sneer at it, through racial prejudice, or despise it as the act of a fanatic—and if you're that sort of a person, I'd advise you to stop before you read further. But if you honor courage, regardless of its setting, then here's a story you'll not soon forget.

The man involved is a poor, middle-aged Jewish tailor. We'll call him Mr. Levinson, though that's not his name. He lives in Baltimore and is the sole support of a large family. You've seen hundreds of his sort—frail, kindly men, old before their time, their thin bodies bent by years of huddled stitching.

At times this prematurely old Mr. Levinson endures hours of intense pain, for which he can afford no medical relief. For the last three years a dogging despair, as his small business dwindled, has become his chronic anxiety. During the winter his earnings averaged little more than $4 a week. The house grew cold. There was little on the table. Frequently the father has pretended to have no appetite; placing his portion on the childrens' plates, he would leave the room quietly—go to sit in his darkened, empty shop.

But always on the Sabbath night the family gathered, the candles were lighted and his thin hands were folded, as he prayed, above the sacred bread.

Three weeks ago Mr. Levinson started out to collect a bill of $1.30. He had a long way to go, and he was very tired. Crowds, too, had always dazed him, and now there was this constant fear. He stood for a moment on the curb, waiting; then timidly he began to cross.

Suddenly the street seemed to leap, monstrous! There was a roaring—the shriek of jammed taxi brakes—darkness exploding in rockets of agony—

Then, silence.

When they lifted him, half of the small, shrunken body sagged shapeless in their hands. At the nearest hospital it was found that his hip was crushed, his leg broken, the flesh mangled. An emergency operation was hastily performed. He was put in a cast.

He came back to consciousness slowly, his mind fumbling, stumbling, through tangled torture.

Night—morning—night—the click of dishes—a blurred face bending. Through it all, the searing pressure of a steel belt, and a torture of thirst that was a detached horror—a voice, far off, screaming, screaming!

Gradually he understood. Felt, blindly, the outlines of the plaster and steel prison in which he lay buried. Saw, with horror, the crippled months or years ahead. And then, with a shock that dwarfed everything else, he realized the Broken Law.

That blurred face was Gentile! That glass of water, for which his tortured body craved, was not Kosher! He must be moved!

In this place he could not eat! From these dishes, he could not drink! His own terror, his own misery—these things did not matter. Comfort, health, life and death even—they did not matter. Only God mattered. The Law must be kept.

And the Law was kept. Through nearly two days of appalling agony, brain-splitting thirst—trapped in the cruel delays which are the lot of the poor—old Mr. Levinson lay there, serving his God.

Then at last he was moved, to such a place as his Law allowed.

And that, as I said before, may seem stupid and fanatical to you who are not a Jew. Neither am I a Jew, nor does my church have any ritual or invoke any law.

Yet I think I know courage when I see it; and, to me, this seems as brave and beautiful an act of devotion as ever has come my way.

I wonder if I would do as much for my God? I wish I were sure that I would.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

It is foolish to retire while angry or out of sorts with any member of your household.

It means that you will have difficulty in getting to sleep and your rest will be troubled and perhaps the night will be wakeful.

If a quarrel takes place in the evening, come to some sesnsible agreement and then compose yourself before you go to bed.

That means the whole day is spoiled and to what end?

It is easy in most any home life to reach a condition when it does not take much to set off oral fireworks, but you don't gain a thing and lose your own as well as the other fellow's respect for you.

Life is too short to mar it with unnecessary mental disturbances.

There are enough of the kind for which we are not responsible.

It is not difficult to create a spirit of good fellowship in a home and an atmosphere of good will, but the will to make things happy must exist.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

A Childlike Heart

Have you the gift of a childlike heart?
Then you are blest indeed!
Of every joy it is seed!

For a childlike heart has such faith and trust
That it questions not at all;
But takes as a portion wholly just
Whatever may befall.

It can see the wonder in common things,
Both distant or near at hand.
The pledge where the arc of the rainbow swings,
The promise of sun-swept land.

It beholds a beauty that grows not less
In the light of love's aging face,
New miracles of grace.

O, pray for the gift of a childlike heart
Which makes all things fair and true.
For every blessing it can impart,
Bringing heaven on earth to you!

Isn't It So?

MODERN WAYS

By Winifred Black

The next time I go to see dear old Aunt Mary, I'm not going to let her know I'm coming.

Aunt Mary is a darling herself, and she lives in the dearest little old-fashioned white house with green blinds. You know, the kind that you can use for a peekhole to see whether it's a friend or a peddler on the doorstep.

Aunt Mary doesn't have a garden—she has a yard, or at least she used to have, and a lovely old-fashioned yard it was, too, with a flower bed on each side and a gravel path in the middle and a picket fence and hollyhocks and sunflowers along the side and back fence. There were sweet peas along the front fence and snapdragons and sweet elyssum and four o'clocks, and tiger lilies, and blue flags and little grass pinks, along the borders of the gravel walk.

Rocking chairs on the porch, white curtains at the bedroom windows, morning glory vines, and everything. And always old Towser waving his flag of welcome at the gate, and the tortoise shell cat and her kittens coming around the corner of the house to see who's who and why, and was there any such thing as a saucer of cream in the world?

Hot cakes and honey for breakfast, coffee that was coffee. Salt pork and fried apples maybe, too, and sometimes liver and bacon, done to a turn or waffles and maple syrup, real breakfasts I thank you. And if you knew Aunt Mary well enough, she'd let you come out in the kitchen and have your breakfast at a neat little table at the kitchen window and you sniffing the good things till you were hungry as a wolf.

And along about half past eleven more good smells in the kitchen. Apple turnovers maybe, or apple dumplings—and at three or four o'clock in the afternoon old-fashioned ginger cookies, laid on the kitchen table to get a little less moist.

Neighbors on the porch in the afternoon, bringing their fancy work, and their friendly gossip, and in the evening a game of cards, and the radio and maybe a sing-song around the old piano.

Dear me, it makes me homesick to think of it—geranium leaves in the linen press smelling of lavender and lemon verbena.

That's why I'm not going to let her know when I'm coming. I hope I may be able to catch her beingherself—just once again, before this tired old world nods off to sleep.

I was starved to death when I got to Aunt Mary's last week and what do you think she had for dinner for me?

A fruit cocktail and something she called "timbals," and a reducing diet dessert—oh, yes, Aunt Mary's "reducing" so no more turnovers, and no more cookies and no more apple dumplings and no more hot cakes and maple syrup—not on your life.

Bran muffins, breakfast foods, and dried fruit, no sugar in it and no cream in your coffee—why the idea, don't you know that cream is fatal to the figure?

And as for a quiet evening—why Aunt Mary belongs to an auction bridge club and she had the lecturer on the poets and how to enjoy them in for a talk, the very first evening I was there.

Aunt Mary is going the pace, bless her heart—I do hope she'll hurry up and get through with it, before I have a chance to visit her again.
